TAKE THOUSANDS OF FOE

ALLIES GAIN 3 MILES

With the British Army in France Aug. 8 (3:30 P. M.)—The British and French have advanced five kilometers (slightly more than three miles) in their new offensive on the Picardy front. Several thousands of prisoners have been counted.

Americans are holding part of the battle line southeast of Amiens, and are believed to be taking part in the new offensive against the Germans. Cantigny, seventeen miles southeast of Amiens, was recaptured by the Americans from the Germans shortly after United States troops were put upon the Picardy front.

London, Aug. 8.—A great offensive was launched against the Germans on the Picardy front by British and French troops today. The fourth British army and the first French army began the drive at dawn, in front of Amiens, the War Office announced. When Field Marshal Haig, the British commander-in-chief, reported the launching of the new offensive it was stated that the attacks were progressing satisfactorily over a wide front. This was the second big allied drive of the year, the first being opened by the Franco-Americans on the Marne. (American troops are stationed on the Picardy front.) The text of the War Office statement reads:

"At dawn this morning the British fourth army and the French first army, under command of Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, attacked on a wide front east and southeast of Amiens. First reports indicate that the attack is progressing satisfactorily."

U.S. TROOPS 'DIG IN' AT VESLE

By NEWTON C. PARKE
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army on the Aisne-Vesle Front, Aug. 7 (9 p. m.)—Beating off repeated counter assaults and inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy, the Americans who forced crossings of the Vesle river between Fismes and Bazoches, dug in and clung tenaciously to their new positions.

Many strong German machine gun positions on the slopes north of the Vesle were wiped out of existence by the hot and accurate fire of the American artillery.

American engineers distinguished themselves by working under a terrific fire from German guns, throwing bridges across the river for the infantry to cross upon.

The American attack was launched at 4:30 yesterday, following four hours of artillery preparation. The assault centred at Fismes and Bazoches.

Our right wing crossed the Vesle in considerable strength, the machine gunners doing much havoc to the enemy.

The left wing was held up near

Copenhagen, Aug. 8.—Captain Strasser, best known German Zeppelin commander in Germany, was killed in the recent attempt by the Germans to raid the southeastern coast of England, it is announced by German newspapers.

NEW DRAFT BILL WILL NOT IMPARE THE NAVY

Washington, Aug. 8.—Rear Admiral Palmer, chief of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department, appearing before the Senate Military Affairs Committee today on the new Manpower bill, testified that its provisions would not interfere with enlistments in the Navy. The Navy complement was practically filled, he said, having between 430,000 and 440,000 men. Its requirements from now on would be only about 15,000 men a month, chiefly for the Merchant Marine, he said.

Paris, Aug. 8.—The allies are now smashing the Germans on the Picardy front. Beginning at 5 o'clock this morning French troops, in conjunction with the British, attacked the German positions southeast of Amiens, the French War Office announced at noon. The attack is developing under favorable conditions, the communique said.

The new counter-drive follows upon the heels of the mighty, successful offensive on the Aisne-Marne front, and the fresh blow fell before the Germans could recover their breath.

The text of the communique follows:

"At 5 o'clock this morning, in conjunction with the British, we attacked southeast of Amiens. The attack is developing under favorable conditions."

Paris, Aug. 8.—American forces thrown across the Vesle River to the west of Fismes were heavily counter-attacked early today. At last accounts the battle was developing over an extensive front, with the Americans holding their positions firmly. Additional units of General Pershing's forces have crossed the river east of Fismes. The allies now hold the northern bank of the stream on a five-mile front in that sector.

Troops of the old Sixty-Ninth Regiment of New York City have been in the very van of the fighting on this region, as they have in the whole struggle that has marked the German retreat from the Marne. Dispatches received here tend to show that this famous unit of the American forces has led the advance in the centre all through the three weeks' battle.

By INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

Washington, Aug. 8.—American troops, brigaded with the British, are in action in the great new British offensive before Amiens. Until their identity is disclosed by General Pershing, officials here will not say just what units actually are there. On July 4 General March stated that the Thirty-Third Division, made up of Illinois troops, was in action on the Picardy front. Since then, however, army officers say they have been returned to General Pershing's direct command.

Today's offensive is designed, army officers say, to remove a serious menace from the British front. The Germans have been concentrating their forces in great strength in front of Amiens and it is believed here that the purpose of the present drive is to shove them back there and thus compel a general retirement along the northern front.

It is assumed here that the withdrawal of reserves from all along the Picardy front to save the Crown Prince's army in its retreat from the Soissons-Rheims salient has weakened the German forces sufficiently to make another allied success possible. Some army officers here today, however, were inclined to believe that Marshals Foch and Haig had discovered evidences that the Germans were planning an attack to lift the pressure on the Vesle line and had simply "beaten them to it."

It is too early yet to forecast results, officers say, but all of the latest information from Picardy has been that the British were chafing under the delay. They have accumulated heavy forces of reserves in the way of men and munitions, and are in position to make a tremendous effort. And another defeat for the Germans at the present time would be reflected materially in the political situation throughout Germany, officials say.

In view of the action of the United States in approving the plan for an army of 5,000,000 men to be raised as soon as the selective draft can be extended, officials here today indicated that the Germans would have little rest from now on.

Such an army as planned by the United States will furnish the man power to keep driving the Germans until they are completely defeated, officers say. It is pointed out that with the 1,500,000 mark in American troops overseas being approached, the British and French need not be as careful of their reserves as they have been in the past.

These Americans now at the front, and those who are going in, are well trained and can be used anywhere soldiers are needed. So, instead of just holding the western front, as had been expected would be all that could be done this year, the allied forces very likely will continue their offensive tactics at various points, making it impossible for the Germans to concentrate for any single individual mighty stroke. Tactics of this sort, army experts say, will go far toward materially shortening the war.

Says German Officer Killed Yankee Prisoner Every Time He Drank

New York, Aug. 8.—How a German commander ordered an American prisoner shot for every glass of wine that he drank, thus killing ten defenceless men, and how American soldiers are laid up for weeks with fever caused by germs which Germans shoot into their ranks, are features of a letter received from an American soldier now reported dead.

The writer was Private Albert W. Bowker of Company H, 165th Infantry, who was killed July 15, and the recipients were his sisters, Mrs. Emily Blake and Miss May Bowker, of No. 146 West 101st street, where he lived.

"You at home do not know the brutality of the German," runs the letter. "I am going to relate an instance which shows the color of the Germans and their idea of war.

"On one occasion 60 of our men held 1,000 Germans from attacking us in an outpost. The way that we were placed, the German commander evidently thought that he had run into a full regiment of American soldiers. But he managed to capture some ten of us, and when he learned that there were only 60 Americans engaged in the defensive he took the captured men to headquarters, where he ordered wine to be opened.

"He told our men they were so smart he was going to show them how smart he could be in an emergency. With each glass of wine drank he ordered one of our men shot. This is only one of the brutalities of the damnable Boche.

"I have been laid up for the past few weeks with a fever. The Germans are shooting some kind of a germ across our line. If we are unlucky enough to come in contact with these germs we are generally laid up from two to four weeks."

Terrific Gun Fire of Drive Heard in England

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 8.—Terrific gun fire, apparently from the British front in France, was heard on the southeast coast during the night, increasing to the intensity of drum fire after midnight, said a dispatch to the Star today.

The bombardment (which is believed to have been preliminary to the Franco-British offensive on the Picardy front) could be heard as far inland as Eastbourne.

It began at 7:30 in the evening and increased in violence until midnight. During the morning the cannonade has apparently risen to drum fire.

U. S. ENGINEERS DEFY RAIN OF FIRE ON VESLE

Throw Bridges Across River Under Terrific German Attack

branches by heavy fire from the German artillery and machine guns.

By 10 o'clock the Germans had organized a counter-attack. The attacking waves which charged against the American positions at the foot of the plateau were shattered and the Americans held firmly to their new positions.

After an effective bombardment and under cover of heavy fire from our machine guns, the left wing again went forward at dawn this morning, forcing another crossing of the river to the west of Fismes.

The American machine gunners again proved their worth during the past forty-eight hours, which saw crossings of the Vesle forced at two places between Fismes and Bazoches by our infantry.

The terrific pounding of our artillery during the preliminary bombardment last night was followed by annihilating fire from our mitrailleuses, which mowed down the enemy opposition, allowing several American detachments to get across the stream.

The Vesle at the point of crossing is 25 feet wide.

PLAY HAVOC WITH FOE.

The machine guns kept up their deadly spray of bullets while our advanced elements hastily dug themselves in on the narrow shelf of the embankment on the northern side of the stream.

These troops repulsed with severe losses heavy and repeated German counter attacks by which the hoches tried to throw the Americans back into the river.

In the fighting, which lasted from 10 o'clock until after midnight, our artillery fire proved very effective, the gunners steadily shelling the road on the northern side of the Vesle along which the Americans were entrenched. This fire played havoc with the Germans.

While the fighting in this zone (right flank) was dying down and the hoches were removing their dead and wounded, the artillery on our left began paving the way for a new attack.

After a brief shelling, which dislodged the Germans from many machine gun nests, which had been discovered during yesterday's effort to cross the stream near Bazoches, the infantry lunged forward at daybreak.

CROSS THE VESLE.

Meanwhile, American engineers, under the hottest possible enemy fire, had thrown light bridges across the Vesle and within a few minutes we had reached the opposite (northern) bank.

Several detachments forced the enemy back across the high road which parallels the northern bank of the stream and established themselves quickly in preparation for an expected counter attack.

At the time this dispatch was written the counter attack had not been reported, but east of Fismes some of our units were engaged in a sharp struggle with the enemy late this afternoon.

WAR SUMMARY

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor.

With the French and British still hammering the Germans south of the Aisne River and the British biting deeply into the German front in Flanders, the allies opened a terrific new drive today east and southwest of Amiens on the Picardy plains.

The assault was launched over a wide front by the British Fourth army and the French First army at dawn, with Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, the British commander-in-chief, directing the operations.

Initial official dispatches from British great headquarters and the communique issued by the French War Office at noon said that the attack was progressing under favorable conditions.

It is believed that the Germans were again taken by surprise in this second great allied counter-offensive of the year. They were caught napping when Marshal Foch launched the first drive with French and American forces on the Marne on July 18.

The assault opposite Amiens followed a series of sharp local thrusts which the French and British have been carrying out on that front.

In the operations in this zone on Tuesday, French forces drove back the Germans between Braches and Morisel, reaching the Avre River.

Whether or not Americans are taking an important part in the new offensive had not been made known at Amiens, it is fair to assume that they co-operated in this the time this was written. But as Americans were known to be holding a segment of the battle line southeast of new blow.

The extension of the offensive zone from the Aisne-Marne field to Picardy shows that the allies are determined to give the Germans no rest and are taking precautions to forestall any counter-offensive that the German high command might be planning.

In the battle which began on March 21, the Germans advanced to a point about nine miles from Amiens, extending their line in the form of a wedge with the apex lying just east of the city.

Since then, however, the Germans have been forced back, and when the fighting was renewed today in Picardy, the nearest approach of the Germans to Amiens was about ten miles.

The allies are striking hard and it is evidently their object to throw the Germans back from Amiens, just as they were rolled back from the Marne. There is a similarity in the two operations. In Picardy, the Germans sought to drive towards Paris and cut the lines of communication supplying the northern armies by taking Amiens. On the Marne the Germans again tried to advance on Paris, at the same time cutting the communication lines feeding the eastern armies.

The German plans on the Marne have been crushed and upset and now the allies are engaged in overturning the German plan in the north.

PUBLIC AT PACKERS' MERCY, TRADE BOARD WOULD STOP MONOPOLY

FEDERAL MARKETS URGED

Scathing Report of Investigation Given Out by the President Today

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Bitterly assailing the great packing firms of Swift, Armour, Morris, Cudahy and Wilson for creating a "Structure of conspiracy, control, monopoly and restraint," the Federal Trade Commission in a report to President Wilson recommends that immediate steps be taken to give the government a monopoly over such portion of their business "as will restore competition."

The report has been in the hands of the President since July 5, but because of the serious charges made in connection with it and the radical recommendations therein contained, it was not made public until today. Publication today was authorized directly by the President.

After declaring that producers, competitors and consumers are at the mercy of the packers, the commission makes the following recommendations:

TRADES PUBLIC MARKETS.

First—That the government acquire, through the railroad administration, all rolling stock used for the transportation of meat animals and that such ownership be declared a government monopoly.

Second—That the government acquire, through the railroad administration, the original and necessary stock yards of the country to be treated as freight depots and to be operated under such conditions as will insure open, competitive markets, with uniform charges for all services performed, and the acquisition or establishment of such additional yards from time to time as the future development of livestock production in the United States may require.

Third—That the government acquire, through the railroad administration, all privately owned refrigerator cars and all necessary equipment for their proper operation and that such ownership be declared a government monopoly.

Fourth—That the Federal government acquire such of the branch houses, cold storage plants and warehouses as are necessary to provide facilities for the competitive marketing and storage of food products, in the principal centers of distribution and consumption. The same to be operated by the government as public utilities and storage plants under such conditions as will afford an outlet for all manufacturers and handlers of food products on equal terms. Supplementing the marketing and storage facilities thus acquired by the Federal government establish, through the railroad administration at the terminals of all principal points of distribution and consumption, central wholesale markets, and storage plants, with facilities open to all upon payment of just and fair charges.

COMPLETE ARRAIGNMENT.

Accompanying the letter of the commission to the President, is a voluminous report, in which the findings of the board in its complete investigation of the packing industry is contained.

The report shows the magnitude of the large meat packing companies, the various ramifications of their interests and the instruments by which they have established and maintained control, the nature of their combination, with details of the various agreements and combinations; the practices of the combination and their social and economic effects as well as the remedy proposed as before set forth.

"Out of the mass of information in our hands," says the letter of the commission to the President, "one fact stands out with all possible emphasis. The small dominant group of American meat packers are now international in their activities, while remaining American in their identity. Blame which now attaches to them for their practices abroad, as well as at home, inevitably will attach to our country, if the practices continue.

"The purely domestic problems in their increasing magnitude, their monopolization of markets and their manipulations and controls, grave as those problems are, are not more serious than those presented by the added aspect of international activity. This urgently argues for a solution, which will increase and not diminish the high regard in which this people is held in international comity."

CALL FOR LAST PAYMENT ON CITY WAR GARDENS

The last call for the final payment on the municipal war gardens has been issued by Samuel A. Youngman, farm manager. Those who have not paid for their plots in full must do so by August 15. If payment is not made by that day, and unless the plot holder has been excused by the farm manager, the crop will be sold to cover second payment.

Grave of Quentin Roosevelt Found by Aviator

Paris, Aug. 8.—The grave of Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, who fell to his death in his aeroplane during an aerial combat over Chamery on July 17, was found by an American aviator today.

It is located at the edge of a wood near the village, and is surrounded by a wooden cross bearing this inscription:

"Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt, buried by the Germans."

German newspapers announced several days ago that the son of the ex-President of the United States had been buried near the scene of his death. The American had been searching for the grave ever since they captured Chamery.

DEATH OF BACK BAY WOMAN ACCIDENTAL

Authorities Believe Miss Hemenway Plunged Down Cliff Into Sea at Manchester

Manchester-by-the-Sea, Aug. 8.—Miss Clara Hemenway, the prominent Back Bay society woman whose body was found floating at the foot of a steep cliff on the George Cabot estate here, met her death by accident, in the opinion of Medical Referee George A. Stickney of Essex County.

Chief Sullivan of the local police, who viewed the body, is of the same opinion. Bruises on the body indicated that Miss Hemenway slipped and fell headlong down the cliff into the water. She could not swim, and for that matter may have been dead before she struck the water.

The body of the dead woman, who lived at No. 242 Beacon street, was taken to Boston today and the funeral will be held in Boston, it is understood. Miss Hemenway was visiting her sister, Mrs. George Cabot, on whose estate the accident took place.

It was her custom to do daily to a small Summer house on the brink of the cliff, which juts down almost perpendicularly some twelve feet into the water. She was wont to read in the Summer house. She was wearing leather soled shoes, and undoubtedly slipped on the edge of the cliff, and plunged into the sea. The water is about fifteen feet deep off the cliff.

U. S. REGULARS WILL BE SENT TO RUSSIA

Washington, Aug. 8.—General March, chief of staff, declared the American military expedition to Russia would be just as the President portrayed it in his memorandum.

"There will be no Eastern front in Russia," he added.

Two regiments of regular troops from the Philippines will form the vanguard of the expedition, General March said. Later they will be reinforced by troops from the United States. The Philippine regiments are not now of war strength, and aggregate probably not more than 2,500 men. General March's statement follows:

"The United States has organized an expedition to Siberia. The officer selected to command this expedition is Major General William S. Graves, who is now in command of the 8th division, Camp Fremont, Calif. The nucleus of the American force in Siberia will come from the Philippines and will consist of the 27th and 31st regiments of regular Infantry. That force will be supplemented by other troops sent from the United States.

"The purpose of organization of the expedition has been announced by the President through the State Department and I need not refer to that further. The force is relatively small and is not for the purpose of establishing an eastern front in Russia, but for the purpose set forth in the president's memorandum, and no other."

Colonels Stier and Taggart will be in command of the two regiments, the general said. He also said he would announce the arrival of General Graves in Vladivostok as soon as he reaches there.

General March was unable to confirm the report that American troops had been landed at Kandalaska.

"Kandalaska is south of Kola, on the Murman railroad where it touches the Kandalaska Gulf on the White Sea," he said, "and the only dispatch I have seen does not say that American troops were there, but that troops had landed at Archangel. I have seen no dispatches anywhere that American troops are at Kandalaska, and, so far as I know, they are not there."

Carnegie Bids Fish Expert to Hurry to Bar Harbor

Nothing is worrying Mark Bourne of Lenox, Andrew Carnegie's guide and mentor in all matters piscatorial. Mark Bourne is called the Isaak Walton of the Berkshires." Mark is a plumber by trade—when not engaged in fishing—and for many years has piloted the celebrated steel king and peace advocate to the still haunts of the speckled beauties on Lake Mahkeenac.

Mr. Carnegie's faith in Mark's intuition as a fisherman today found expression in an S. O. S. summons from Bar Harbor, Me., for mark to go to Bar Harbor and pilot Mr. Carnegie to the haunts of the cod, haddock, pollock and silver hake.

What matter if Mark Bourne is unfamiliar with the rocks and shoals of Mt. Desert harbor? Mark knows fish, and that should be sufficient.

So next week will see Mark Bourne in company with Mr. Carnegie at Bar Harbor, where Andrew Carnegie has a palatial Summer home, and Mark Bourne will be a guest at one of Bar Harbor's most exclusive Summer hotels.

EXPRESS KILLS AGED WOMAN IN CHELSEA

Carried Eighth of a Mile in Attempt to Cross Track; $836 Picked Up Along Rail

Mrs. Johnanna Connelly, eighty-five years old, of No. 123 Broadway, Chelsea, was killed by a train in Chelsea today, while taking her morning walk. Widow of a veteran of the Civil and Black Hawk Wars, and several times a grandmother, by the fusedio grow old and out of date. Every morning she might be seen strolling leisurely through the streets of Chelsea.

She lived with her son, Joseph Connelly, and his children.

Today as usual, she left the house for her morning constitutional, down by the Arlington street railroad crossing.

The Rockport Express of the Boston & Maine, bound into Boston, came thundering down the track. John J. Taylor, the crossing tender, lowered gates. She had done it often before. She could cross the tracks before the train reached the crossing, she thought. She waved aside the gate tender, who tried to stop her from crossing until the train passed.

But today the big express train moved faster than usual, or possibly the aged woman moved more slowly. The engine, roaring by the crossing, picked up her frail form. She was carried an eighth of a mile to the Spruce street crossing—dead.

Patrolmen John Keating and John E. Parsons found $836 in bills and a $1,000 bank book dropped by the aged woman on the tracks. The train was in charge of Conductor S. Charlesworth and Engineer D. Blake.

LIEUTENANT BAKER IS WOUNDED IN ACTION

Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, No. 115 Upham street, Melrose, was wounded in action July 15th, and is in a base hospital, according to a letter received from him by his parents today. His name has not yet appeared on the casualty list. He is with the Headquarters' Company, 30th Infantry.

SPEEDY PATROL BOAT WINS RACE WITH DEATH

Rockland, Me., Aug. 8.—The fastest patrol boat stationed at this port was rushed at top speed to North Haven, carrying a pulmotor, to save the three-year-old child of Mrs. Herbert D. Winlock of Boston. The child fell overboard while playing on a float, and was still alive when taken from the water.

McADOO FAVORS 80 PERCENT. ON WAR PROFITS

Wires Kitchin It Is the Only Way to Reach Real War Profiteers

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo tonight gave out a telegram which he had sent to Chairman Kitchin of the Ways and Means Committee of the House in which the secretary announced a firm stand for a tax of 80 per cent. on war profiteering. Mr. McAdoo left for Cincinnati. The telegram follows:

"Hope has advised me of his talk with you Wednesday last. I greatly appreciate assurance you gave him of your desire to meet as far as you possibly can the views of the treasury. I should be very sorry to have progress on the revenue bill delayed for conference concerning war profits tax as I understand you suggest.

"This is a matter which has engaged my earnest thought, and in order that you may know my views without delay, I take the liberty of telegraphing to confirm and reindorse the postmaster general, as outlined in my letter to you of June 5 and to express the conviction that the program is sound and reasonable.

"I earnestly hope that it may commend itself to you and the committee. I regard the war profits tax as integral and indispensable part of that program.

"As a result of the further consideration of the subject which has been given since I wrote you I am confirmed in my opinion that a flat war profits tax of 80 per cent. should be imposed. Of course, ample safeguards should be provided against hardships in extraordinary cases in the application of such a rate.

"The adoption of an 80 per cent. war profits tax should render unnecessary and I believe undesirable, any increase in the existing excess profits tax rate. It is my strong conviction that the taxation of genuine war profits is the only way to reach real profiteering and that it is at the same time a thoroughly justifiable measure upon economic grounds as well as a certain and indispensable producer of a large part of the required revenue.

PRODUCERS SHOULD BE CONTENT.

"The patriotic producers of America should be content if one-fifth of their war profits are secured to them, especially when we reflect that the men who are fighting and dying in France to save the liberties of those who stay at home and to make it possible for them to continue in business are limited by act of Congress to $396 per year for their services and have to give their blood in the bargain.

"Should we be more partial and tender to those who are protected in safety at home than we are to those who make the supreme sacrifices for us on the field of battle?

"I sincerely trust also that amendments which experience has shown to be desirable, if not essential, in the provisions affecting the determination of excess profits taxes may be adopted."

U. S. Would Carry on War Alone, Says T. P. O'Connor

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 8.—"America has gone into the war as a matter of grim business to be seen through," said T. P. O'Connor, famous Irish leader, in the House of Commons.

"I am convinced," continued Mr. O'Connor, who has just returned from the United States, "that she (the United States) would go on even if she had to go alone.

"Unless Britain becomes reconciled to Ireland she will never become reconciled to Americans of Irish blood."

ITALY GRATEFUL TO AMERICAN RED CROSS

Appreciation of Society's Noble Work Will Be Voiced in Baby's Prayer

Washington, Aug. 8.—"As soon as these babies learn their prayers they shall be taught to pray for their far-distant friends across the sea."

This is a line from an Italian newspaper, the Gazetta di Venezia, which recently printed a glowing description of the work of relief that the American Red Cross has done in Italy.

It tells how grateful the Venetians were when a milk station was opened in their quaint city by the Red Cross agents—how much it meant to them during their hour of suspense, anxiety and peril, when the Austrians were thundering almost at the city's gates, and when it was feared the city might be turned to ruins by enemy guns.

The children of Venice were in dire need, as the milk supply was running low. The American Red Cross was enabled to procure a supply and rush it to the sorely beset city.

In a few days the families which had deserted the city and turned refugees returned to their homes, for the Austro-German armies were held along the line of the Piave.

We are indeed deeply grateful to our ally (America), who not only shows her spirit and sympathy by generous donations of money, but leaves no stone unturned through which to demonstrate the feeling of sisterhood between the two nations," the article concludes.

BRITISH FLIERS DOWN FOUR ENEMY PLANES

London, Aug. 8.—Four German machines were shot down by British flyers and another was brought down in flames, the War Office statement on aviation says. Twenty-four tons of bombs were dropped by British bombing planes on various German targets. The British suffered no aerial losses.

GENERAL STRIKE MAY BE VOTED AT LYNN

Unless 500 Electric Workers Are Reinstated Action Will Be Taken Tonight

A general strike vote may be taken by employes of the General Electric Company of Lynn tonight.

The investigation of the causes of the recent strike of General Electric employes was opened at Lynn City Hall today by representatives of the National War Labor Board.

The proceedings were adjourned ten minutes after they began, to be resumed at 2 o'clock tomorrow. The reason for the adjournment was that the war board representatives will be unable to conduct the investigation until the 500 workers who were turned out of the factory yesterday are reinstated.

If these workers are reinstated there will be no strike vote tonight at the meeting of the several unions.

500 OUT ON STRIKE.

Five hundred employes, more than half of them women and girls, are on strike today, charging German propaganda on the part of the foreman of the "Second Department 30" of the plant.

Their action followed the discharge yesterday of a young man in that department and the abrupt shutting down of the department by the foreman. The 500 workers say that they were summarily dismissed and threatened with arrest if they did not quit the premises at once.

SAYS FOREMAN IS PRO-GERMAN.

At a meeting, held at union headquarters, No. 35 Munroe street, the operatives charged that the foreman and his two assistants were Germans and German sympathizers, and claimed that neither they nor the government were getting proper protection while the department is under its present management. They stated that this department produces some of the finest and most delicate instruments used by the navy.

Early today feeling ran high, and a tie-up of the entire plant was threatened. Representatives of the National War Labor Board who met today at Lynn City Hall to discuss final terms of settlement of the recent strike which tied up 14,000 workers, were asked to make a full investigation of the new situation.

Witnesses declared that at the time of the sinking of the Lusitania one of the foremen exclaimed, "It's a good thing. I hope they get more of them."

They say that they are ready to produce sworn testimony to this remark, and to the fact that before this country entered the war, the sympathies of the foremen were openly with Germany. If some action in this regard is not taken, they declare that there will be a general strike affecting the whole plant.

The immediate occasion of the 500 being thrown out of work was the discharge, at 4 p. m. yesterday, of a young man in "Second Department M."

ENEMY PLOT CHARGED.

According to the foreman, he broke open a drawer in the bench of the employe and found tickets for a baseball lottery, also a device for printing such tickets, made from materials belonging to the company. The young man, who is twenty-one, has a wife and two children, was immediately discharged and the department shut down. The employes declare that this action was a plot to tie up production and hamper government work.

General Manager Walter C. Fish of the plant promised a careful investigation of the case, and said that if the young man in question was found to be blameless he should receive full redress. According to the young man, the tickets found in his drawer did not belong to him.

SAYS GERMAN WOMEN WILL FIGHT IF NECESSARY

Albany, Ga., Aug. 8.—That Germany will put her women in the battle line before admitting defeat and that they will fight with a ferocity equal to that of the male Prussian, was declared by Col. C. W. Stiles, head medical officer at Camp Hancock, in an address here. Colonel Stiles spent seven years in Germany.

Despite Improvement Trading in Stocks Remains Quiet and Somewhat Narrow

BACK BAY WOMAN SUED BY GOWN MAKER

Mrs. Emily Amoroso, who carries on business at No. 267 Boylston street as importer and maker of street and evening costumes, automobile coats and opera wraps for ladies and young women, has entered suit for $5,000 in the Superior Court for Suffolk County against Mrs. Edith V. Dittemore, wife of John V. Dittemore of No. 466 Commonwealth avenue.

On or about April 1 last Mrs. Dittemore made a call at the shop of the woman, and accused the latter, so it is alleged, of having ordered false and dishonest bill. Mrs. Amoroso also says that Mr. Dittemore went to other establishments and made similar charges against her.

SHOWERS BREAK HEAT WAVE; MORE ARE COMING

Boston residents flocked into business today with a refreshing feeling, welcoming a temperature that hovered about 80° for several hours.

Weather reports from the middle Western and Ohio Valley regions tend to indicate that the heat wave has been broken. Here in New England the forecast for today is partly cloudy weather with local thunder showers during the afternoon and night. Friday will be partly cloudy with light winds and not much change in temperature.

WOMAN SUES CHINESE ESTATE FOR SERVICES

Miss Emma Goodwin has brought suit in the Suffolk Superior Court for $75,000 against Joy Gouy Shong, administrator of the late Pang Suey, a herb doctor on Dartmouth street, for services which the plaintiff says she rendered under a contract. Miss Williams says that Suey induced her to enter his employ for the duration of his life as confidential secretary and housekeeper. According to the suit, he agreed to pay her so much money as she reasonably deserved.

30 ARE KILLED BY HEAT IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 8.—New York today estimated thirty were dead and more than a thousand prostrated in the apparent breaking of the greatest heat wave the East has ever known. It was still intensely hot today, the thermometer officially registering 84 at 10 a. m., but this was 18 degrees below yesterday's record.

STAMP SYSTEM A SAVING, TELEGRAPH OFFICIALS SAY

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 8.—A stamp system which would save the Government thousands of dollars has been suggested by officials of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies of this city. They suggest that in place of charge accounts and the handling of cash on prepaid messages, stamps similar to postage stamps could be affixed to the telegrams and canceled, thus avoiding much complicated bookkeeping which would release some thousands of men and women throughout the country for more essential work.

WAR SOON OVER, WRITES DORCHESTER SOLDIER

John T. Wall, thirty-six years, of No. 10 White terrace, Dorchester, connected with the Fifty-sixth Regiment, Battery H, now doing duty in France, writes his many friends that things are coming the way of the Americans and by the dash and vigor that Uncle Sam's troops are displaying the war will soon be a thing for history pages only. Fifteen years ago Wall enlisted and went to Fort McKinley, and when one enlistment was up he got in again, as he believed the time was coming when trained men were needed. He has a brother, William, in the navy.

WIFE IN LOVE TRIANGLE TELLS OF STRUGGLE

Skimped and Saved for Husband, Declares Mrs. Blackstone of Providence

Providence, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Earl W. Blackstone who had her debonair hotel clerk-husband sent to war rather than have him transfer his love to Miss. Prudence Barr, a hotel cashier, tells of working as a witress in restaurants in Boston, Philadelphia and other cities while her husband worked as a bell-hop unable to find employment as a clerk.

The married life of the Blackstones was cozy, despite the moving about looking for work, until four months ago when the wife says she became suspicious as a result of irregular visits by the husband to his home.

A writ of arrest in a civil suit alleging alienation of affections against Miss Barr, brought by the wife, bared an unusual triangle love tangle.

In telling of her married life Mrs. Blackstone said:

"Earl was working in a small hotel on Washington street, Boston, near Boylston street, when I was introduced to him by a lady friend with whom I am now living. He wasn't making much money but his prospects were good, so we went to Hyde Park and Rev. William Reed married us on April 29, 1914. Earl was twenty-two years old.

"We hired a room on Joy street and I went to work as a waitress to help save money for a home. Earl lost his job after a few weeks, and for four months I was the breadwinner.

"Unable to get another job in Boston we tried Philadelphia and had hard luck so I went to work in a restaurant while Earl tried to get work as a clerk and finally went to work as a bell-hop at the Adelphia Hotel. We could not save much money but were happy. Bell-hopping didn't suit Earl and we decided to go back to Boston.

"Earl heard there was a job as clerk open in Providence and we took the train praying for a change in luck. That was two years ago. He went to work the same day we arrived here and for once our luck changed.

"I thought with us both working we would soon be able to have our own home so I went to work in the Memorial Hospital at Pawtucket, working in the laundry. I didn't care what kind of work it was. I wanted to help my husband. I worked at the hospital for a year and turned over every cent to Earl until we had $1,400 saved. I thought I had done my share and as my lady friend from Boston was living here we went to live with her on Lancaster street.

"I was perfectly happy and contented. Earl was a good husband until about nine months ago, when I noticed a change in him.

"I soon learned that Miss Barr was cashier in the same hotel, and others knew more than I did. I begged Earl to remember what the minister said when we were married, and he told me he never would forget it. Four months ago he began staying away nights at intervals, and finally staying away for several days at a time. There was nothing I could do. He wouldn't listen to me. From a loving husband he changed to—well, I can't explain his actions.

"When I had Miss Barr arrested in a civil suit on July 25, I thought Earl would see the folly of his actions, but it seems he hasn't yet, and I have not seen him since. He continued to go about with this woman, and I told the local board how he treated me and they ordered him to go to war.

"I love my husband and would forgive him if he would come back to me. I hope when they are parted he will have time to think over his treatment of me and act as a husband should. I have been unhappy for several months and I have done my share, but Earl is the one found wanting. When he goes to camp he will have time to think it all over.

"I don't believe that Earl has transferred his affections. He is too good a man to do that. No woman has any right to claim another woman's husband as she does my husband's and is doing her duty."

Mrs. Blackstone was Dora Lawrence of Lowell, Mass., before she was married.

DR. P. A. E. SHEPPARD,

Boston doctor who has won place in British Medical Corps after having been rejected ten times.

After having been ten times rejected by the United States and Canada, Dr. Philip A. E. Sheppard, of No. 419 Boylston street and Arlington Heights, has been accepted by the Royal Army Medical Corps, of the British Army, and has started for England. Dr. Sheppard is best known as the Billy Sunday of the Red Cross, and as a big game hunter in Africa. During the Red Cross drive he was one of the four-minute men who operated throughout New England, and he has the record of having raised $1,000 a minute for the Red Cross.

"It was a tough job to get in," he said at the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission at No. 44 Bromfield street, before he left Boston, "but I would have kept on trying as long as there was a war, if the British had not accepted me this time."

Dr. Sheppard made six attempts to get into the United States Army. He tried the United States Navy once, and was rejected three times by Canada, because of a slight physical affection which he did not think should bar him from service, and which he himself has since corrected.

HERBERT PROMOTED TO BE LIEUTENANT-COLONEL

Worcester, Aug. 8.—"I had the honor of being with Major Herbert of your city for about three months and believe me, Senator, that boy ought to be a General. I left him with regret and have been transferred to the tank corps."

This is part of a letter written to Senator James L. Harrop by his former associate, Representative Ward M. Parker of New Bedford, who is now a member of the 326th Battalion of the 311th Tank Centre. Since the letter was written Major John F. J. Herbert of Worcester has been promoted to a lieutenant-colonelcy.

CONSTANT WAR AT HOME, ASKS TO BE DRAFTED

Worcester, Aug. 8.—How a man must stay at home and fight even though he prefers the trenches was exemplified when an undersized little fellow walked into a draft board office here and demanded to be drafted. "I'm in Class 4," he said, "and always in hot water. When I'm home it's a case of fight all the time. If I'm not home my wife goes out and hunts me up. Then it's fight all the way home. I'm sick of it. Draft me."

WASHINGTON BOY TWICE DECORATED FOR BRAVERY

Paris, Aug. 8.—Harold D. Jeffery of Washington, D. C., member of the French ambulance service, has been awarded the French military medal and the Croix de Guerre for driving wounded through shell fire to and from a Paris hospital. As soon as he came out of the silver, after an operation, he said with a smile:

"C'est la guerre!"

ENSIGN TO WED GIRL IN EGYPT BY PROXY

All Winser Needs Now is Obliging Girl at Great Lakes Naval Station

Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Aug. 8.—Ensign Rudolph Winser, this station, is getting married. He's been getting married for some time, and will be for another month or so. Some time next November he expects it'll all be over and Miss Emily Oral, of Cairo, Egypt, will be Mrs. Rudolph Winser—for she is getting married, too.

It's this way. Miss Oral is still in Egypt where, on the banks of the Nile, Winser met her four years ago, wooed her and won her, and then departed on his battleship, the S. S. S. North Carolina. So, when recently he decided to get married he took out a license here and she took one out in Cairo, and each mailed one to the other. When they arrive Ensign Winser will hunt up an obliging girl who will be proxy for his sweetheart, and the ceremony will be performed here, while in Egypt Miss Oral will stand before authorities there with a proxy bridegroom and the words will be said.

Then, when the necessary evidential documents have been exchanged the two will be one, and Miss Oral—or, rather, Mrs. Winser—will set sail via an anti-submarine route for America and her navy husband.

McCORMICK TO GO BACK DESPITE HIS WOUNDS

Lieutenant Arthur McCormick, son of Dr. C. J. McCormick, of Waltham, who was reported seriously wounded in the first days of the counter offensive on the Marne, has cabled home that he received a shrapnel wound in the stomach and hopes to be back at the front in five or six weeks. He is a dentist attached to a regular army machine gun battalion.

SHIPPING BOARD ISSUES CALL FOR ENGINEERS

Another urgent call for first and second engineers to serve on new ships going out of the New England ports has just been issued by Burton headquarters of the United States Shipping Board.

"If the ships are to be kept moving it is absolutely necessary that a considerable number of first and second assistant engineers report immediately to the Government Sea Service Bureau at No. 173 Milk street," said Harrington Pike, head of the local office of this bureau.

"Besides those needed for immediate service," said he, "the Shipping Board wishes to hear from a large number who will be available for sea service during the next few weeks."

REPORTS LEXINGTON BOYS WELL IN FRANCE

A cablegram from Second Lieutenant Chester Norwood Shaffer of Somerville, now in France, received by Miss Millared Buttery of 4 Bedford street, Lexington, tells that on August 1 he had seen seven Lexington boys and that they were all safe and well. The boys referred to were Roger Hubbell, James McKearney, Ralph Currier, Leo DeVeau, Fred Tullar and Edward Maguire of the 101st Engineers, and Jesse Perry of the Medical Corps, who was recently awarded the Croix de Guerre. Shaffer was commissioned a second lieutenant in the motor transport division, on June 11, and his duties now are that of paymaster for the entire regiment.

WESTERN UNION OPERATORS WIN FIGHT

Will Be Allowed to Organize and Discharged Men Will Be Reinstated

Washington, August 8.—The Commercial Telegraphers' Union has virtually won its fight to organize the Western Union offices. It is understood its members are not to be discharged for union affiliations and those previously discharged by the company are to be reinstated by the company at the order of Postmaster General Burleson.

This was the information given to a meeting of the local union of the C. T. U. A. by S. J. Konenkamp, president of the C. T. U. A., after a long conference with the Postmaster General.

The word spread across the continent in private messages to union leaders but no formal announcement was made.

WAGE QUESTION STILL PENDING.

The matter of wages in the appeal to the war labor board by the employes of the Western Union and the Postal Companies is still pending before that board and probably will be adjudicated there as it has not been raised by the unions in their appeal to the Postmaster General.

The presence of representatives of the American Federation of Labor about the union officials here tonight developed the fact that the A. F. of L. is watching the relations of the C. T. U. A. and the postoffice department closely.

Whatever the policy of the Postoffice Department it will affect not only the C. T. U. A., but also 60,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and 50,000 railroad telegraphers, 20,000 of whom handle commercial messages.

TO CONSOLIDATE RIVALS.

Postmaster General Burleson is continuing his active reorganization of the companies which began by the appointment of committees to consider telegraph improvements.

"Government operation and control of the telephone will undoubtedly cause the co-operation and consolidation of competing systems wherever possible," said Mr. Burleson.

This is the first formal indication that the government would consolidate Bell and independent companies competing in many of the large cities throughout the country and means inter-communicating service between the two systems, so that a subscriber to one company will be able to reach the subscribers of the other and it will no longer be necessary for merchants to have two telephones in their offices to do business.

COPPER MAGNATES ASK ANOTHER PRICE BOOST

Washington, Aug. 8.—The price fixing committee of the War Industries Board held an all day session with the copper millionaires in an attempt to fix the next price of copper. The board is chiefly interested in stimulating the production of copper. The copper interests are asking for an additional increase in price so that the high cost plants can have some of a margin. The committee will consider the trade's recommendations for several days before recommending a new price to the President. The present price is 26 cents, an increase from 23½.

KERENSKY IN ENGLAND, NOT COMING TO AMERICA

London, Aug. 8.—The report that Alexander Kerensky is in America is erroneous, the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian telegraphs his paper. He adds the Russian ex-Premier is spending a few days in the country in England and has no immediate intention of going to the United States.

FRANKFURTER ADDED TO WAR INDUSTRIES BOARD

Washington, Aug. 8.—Labor was accorded further recognition by the government when Felix Frankfurter, chairman of the War Labor Policies Board, was added to the Priorities Committee of the War Industries Board.

YOU'LL LAUGH! DOESN'T HURT TO LIFT CORNS OUT

Magic! Costs few cents! Just drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly it stops aching, then you lift the bothersome corn off with the fingers. Truly! No humbug!

Try Freezone! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and callutes, without one particle of pain, soreness or irritation. Freezone is the mysterious ether discovery of a noted Cincinnati genius. Great!

WILSON'S NIECE IS MARRIED IN WHITE HOUSE

War Time Simplicity Marks Wedding of Alice Wilson to Rev. McElroy

Washington, Aug. 8.—The White House saw its first war wedding when Miss Alice Wilson, a niece of the President, was married to the Rev. Isaac Stewart McElroy. Miss Wilson is the daughter of Joseph Wilson, of Baltimore. The ceremony was performed in the blue room by the father of the groom, the Rev. Dr. Isaac Stewart McElroy, Sr. It took exactly four minutes and President Wilson was among the first to kiss the bride. Mrs. Wilson, the President's wife, followed him in friendly salutation.

Mrs. McElroy is the fifteenth White House bride, and the fourth bride of Wilson administration. The present Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Sayre and Mrs. McAdoo are the others. The utmost simplicity, in keeping with the times, prevailed at the wedding tonight, which was held while a terrific wind and thunder storm was in progress.

There were only sixteen persons present and these included: The President and Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, the Rev. and Mrs. Isaac S. McElroy, Sr., Mrs. Martin Crook of Spartanburg, S. C., Miss Elizabeth Perkins of Muncie, Ind., Professor M. R. Turnbull of the Union Theological Seminary, Rev. Charles L. King, Richmond, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bryant, cousins of the bride, and J. R. Bolling, brother of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Directly after the ceremony the wedding supper was served in the state dining room. The bride's cake was a very simple one, and made in accordance with the rules of the food administration. The bride and groom departed tonight for the mountains o Virginia and from there will go to their home in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where Mr. McElroy is pastor of the Presbyterian church.

ADAM AND EVE WERE PRUSSIAN SAYS GERMAN

Belief Taught to Children, According to Quotation From Philosophers

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 8.—German children are taught to believe Adam and Eve were Prussians, according to Professor Herman H. Horne of New York University.

Professor Horne quoted from the writings of a number of German philosophers and Lutheran clergymen to prove his assertion. He said that the German soldiers going to the front carry three books with them. They are Goethe's "Faust," Dr. Weitzsche and New Testament. He then quoted the following from Weitzsche:

"Ye have heard how in old times, it is said, 'Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth,' but I say, 'Blessed are the valiant for they shall make the earth their throne.' Ye have heard it said 'Blessed are the peacemakers,' but I say, 'Blessed are the war makers for they shall be called the children of Adam, and greater than Jehovah.'

"A whole book has been written about the German God since the war began. In this book we find the Supreme Being described as a German."

Professor Horne read extracts from a letter he said was written recently by a German girl to a friend in Switzerland. He quoted as follows:

"As a matter of fact there is but one race that is worthy of ruling the world, which has already attained the highest degree of civilization, and that race is our own, the Prussians. Our pastor explained yesterday that our first parents, Adam and Eve, were Prussians."

Boys Under 21 Did Fighting in the Civil War

Washington, Aug. 8.—The impending draft of men from 18 to 45 years of age makes the fact that boys did the fighting in the Union Army of the Civil War of especial interest at this time.

During the four years of the Civil War, 2,859,795 men 21 years of age and under enlisted in the Union Army.

The number 22 years of age and over was 828,516.

The total enlisted personnel was 2,788,314.

The number 18 years and under was 1,151,438.

Of those, those 16 years and under numbered 844,801.

Boys 14 years of age and under numbered 1,523.

Those 12 years and under aggregated 232.

The number of boys 10 years and under was 25.

DEPRIVATIONS COMING, SAYS BARUCH

People Must Prepare to Go Without Many Things, Declares War Board Head

Washington, Aug. 8.—"The United States must prepare for deprivations," is the warning of Bernard Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, and closer in touch with the effect the war program will have on industry than any other man in the country.

"Up to this time, no man, nor woman, has lacked for anything because of war conditions," he continued. "It will be otherwise in the future.

"Just what the new war program is to be we are not yet sure, but it involves a tremendous expansion over anything we have considered up to this time.

"The increased size of the army means a shortage of production. Millions of men will be taken from productive activities into the army. Their places cannot all be filled by skilled workers and there must be a period during which the industrial substitutes are learning their duties and acquiring skill.

"Then the demands of the military establishment for supplies are increasing faster than is its personnel. No one has any idea of the increased demand for military supplies unless he can check up on the flow of requisitions and estimates from the government through this department. And the problem is not alone one of fuel and steel, for ordnance and ships; it includes clothing, shoes, foodstuffs, everything that man is accustomed to utilize for his comfort and living.

"Civilian requirements and the non-essential industries must yield to the needs of military establishment. There is but one important thing before us: To win this war.

"I should not hesitate to take anything anyone might have for his own advantage if the taking would benefit the whole of society and help win the war. Every man's life is at the call of the nation and so must be every man's property.

"We are living today in a highly organized state of socialism. The state is all; individual is of importance only as he contributes to the welfare of the state. His property is his only as the state does not need it. He must hold his life and his possessions at the call of the state."

The Letters of Katharine Dorr, a Boston Society Girl, Written While She Was Engaged in Refugee Work in France

A cultured girl writing to her mother the scenes she saw, the impressions she gained, the vivid pictures of a little-known side of the war—the life of refugees and what American society girls are doing to help them.

Without effort—unconsciously—the spirit of France—its bravery—its tragedy—and the heart interest of a war-torn nation, crept into Miss Dorr's letters. They make you feel as she felt—they make you see as she saw.

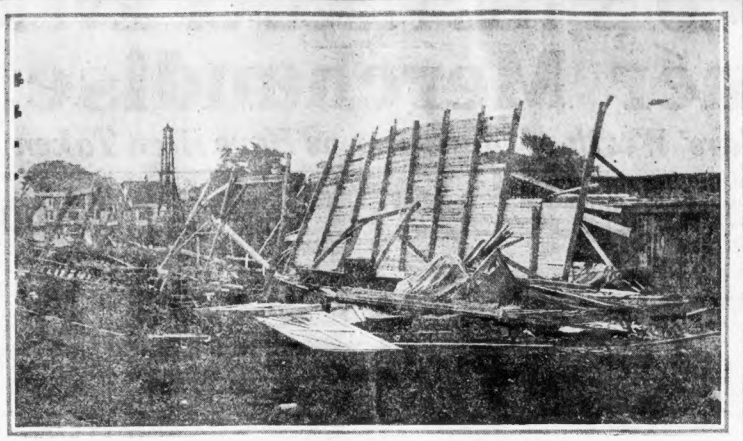
NEW WAR PLANT AT QUINCY DEMOLISHED BY STORM'S FURY



Twenty thousand dollar war plant of Murray & Tregurtha on Neponset River at Quincy, levelled last evening during the terrific wind and lightning storm. The building had just been completed to make submarine chasers. The roof is seen standing on its side.

Reconstruction work on the recently finished brick and wood building of Murray & Tregurtha on the Neponset river at Quincy, which was demolished by a bolt of lightning and wind during the terrible electrical storm last evening, was begun today. Workmen were on the premises clearing away the wreckage at an early hour, and as the plant is to be used by the government to build submarine chasers, all possible speed will be made to erect a new one.

The damage done to the new plant was estimated at $20,000, and had the it is estimated that the damage to accident happened a week later there would have been 100 workmen in the building. Persons in the vicinity declare they saw a bolt of lightning descend upon the building and that immediately after the roof and sides of the plant collapsed.

Patriotic commuters who were beginning to show justifiable pride over their war gardens were dismayed at the havoc the wind and hail wrought among their crops. Tomato plants were uprooted and corn and beans beaten down by the fury of the elements.

Arlington gardeners suffered the most severely. Truck gardeners who supply the markets of Boston found their crops seriously damaged, and gardens and fruit trees alone will total several hundred thousand dollars.

Shade trees in public parks around Boston, especially on the Common, were torn from the ground by the seventy-mile-an-hour gale.

Elms that had stood for generations were snapped off like pipestems, and not a few were split by lightning bolts.

The fire departments were considerably hampered in city and suburbs by the number of fires at one time. Fifteen alarms for fire started by lightning were sounded inside of an hour and a half.

At the Downes Lumber Company yards on Harrison avenue a bolt started a blaze that in a few minutes had consumed $15,000 worth of lumber.

The tall steeple of the Second Unitarian Church of Boston at the corner of Audubon circle and Beacon street was ripped nearly in two by lightning. The bolt, descending from the steeple, ripped up the sidewalk in front of the church.

Lighting also caused damage in the following places: Ivers & Pond Piano Company, where a large sign was struck; the roof garden of the Hotel Westminster, Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, the Morse school in Somerville, a number of Summer cottages along the South Shore, the Tufts College bridge, and the icehouse of the Cambridge Ice Company on Spy Pond, Arlington.

MELROSE BOY WRITES WOUNDS ARE HEALING

Writing from France, Private Lester V. Grocott, nineteen years, son of Mrs. Annie Grocott, Myrtle street, Melrose, says that he is recovering from his wounds and can now turn over in bed. He was recently reported as seriously wounded in action in the casualty list of July 26.

ASKS THOSE WHO CAN TO CALL FOR ICE

Shortage of Drivers Makes Delivery Problem Serious, Says James J. Phelan

On account of the increasing number being taken in the draft, there is a decided shortage in ice wagon drivers.

James J. Phelan, Assistant Food Administrator, and chairman of the special committee on ice, suggests that it will be of great assistance if those who own automobiles or horse drawn vehicles will go to the ice companies' depots for their ice; by so doing they will relieve the drivers that much, and this time can be devoted to supplying less fortunate customers who do not own automobiles or horses.

By so doing these customers will receive their ice at one-half the delivered price, or twenty-five cents per hundred pounds at the ice depot. This is a chance for you to render additional service in war work, and perhaps make it possible for some families to be supplied, who would otherwise be obliged to go without ice.

Tickets for ice at these reduced rates are on sale at the various offices of the Boston companies, and at the Brookline Food Centre, and will be distributed from the following depots, also at the "cash and carry" ice stations already established:

Fresh Pond Ice Company, Washington street, Somerville.

Downing Ice Company, Kenrick street, Brighton.

Winter Hill Ice Company, Charles street, East Cambridge.

Independent Ice Company, Second street, East Cambridge.

Blue Hill Ice Company, Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan.

Milton Ice Company, Central avenue, Milton.

Highland Ice Company, Gardner street, West Roxbury.

WALNUT TREES ENLIST FOR SERVICE IN FRANCE

Sullivan, Ind., Aug. 8.—Mann's Grove, Sullivan County's most beautiful picnic spot, is soon to be a part of a grain field. The big walnut trees will enlist for overseas service in the capacity of gun stocks, aeroplane propellors and wing braces, according to Dr. J. L. Durham, who owns the grove. Dr. Durham stated the Government is calling upon him to send his grove to war, and that he will "expect every splinter to do its duty."

ST. MARY'S TO RAISE THIRTY STARRED FLAG

Milford, Aug. 8.—The service flag in honor of members of St. Mary's Academy alumni who joined the war service will be dedicated Sunday following the mass at St. Mary's Church for deceased sailors and soldiers by the Rev. David F. McGrath, the pastor. The flag has thirty stars and will fly from a fifty-foot steel pole. A large American flag will fly at the top.

SAILORS SANG AS COVINGTON WENT DOWN

Boys on Nearby Raft Warble Away as Though Nothing Had Happened

How he escaped from the torpedoed Covington without even getting his feet wet, and how sailors on a nearby raft sang "as though nothing had happened," is related by George W. Cashen, former mess attendant on the Covington, in a letter received here by his wife. Their home is at No. 232 Hyde Park avenue, Jamaica Plain. The letter follows:

"By the time you receive this letter you will hear the news of our being torpedoed. At last we got ours. It came as suddenly and without one minute's warning, and I could hardly realize it at the time. Such a crash I will never forget it as long as I live. I had just entered the mess hall and had been seated five minutes when this terrible crash came.

HAD NO WARNING.

"I knew in an instant what had happened as I jumped to my feet and made for the deck. The deck trembled under my feet and the bulkheads creaked. There seemed to be a great flash of light and I could smell powder. The lights went out, leaving us in darkness. Immediately after the crash the ship listed to port and it seemed as though we would tip over. The boats were lowered immediately and without confusion, and got away without mishap.

"The officers and crew carried out their orders finely and the discipline was very good. I got over and out into a boat and took a blanket along, as I thought it would be cold. There was one other fellow came down into my boat and then we pushed off to get out of danger from another shot. While we were rowing we passed rafts, and one had three fellows singing away as though nothing had happened. Destroyers stood by, and after they had scouted around to make sure the sub had gone, they picked us up. It happened about 5 o'clock, just dusk, and it was 15:30 when I got aboard the destroyer. We were made as comfortable as possible, although it was a bit crowded. Our entire crew got aboard the destroyer, which left their own crew made it a little bit crowded. Some of the fellows had gone over half-dressed, while some had their overcoats on. Some only had their undershirts, and others were without shoes. We were all glad to get off and the spirit of the crew was remarkable.

"I didn't even get my feet wet.

STOOD BY ALL NIGHT.

"The worst accident was a cut on the foot which one fellow got. It was remarkable to think we only lost six men out of a crew of nearly 800. The ship did not go down until the next afternoon at 2:30, so we had plenty of time to get off. We stood by the ship all night, and at 6 in the morning we set off for this port. It was about 3 o'clock when we pulled into this port and about 5:30 when we landed here.

"We must have been some sights to the people, as we were all filthy from the destroyer. It was a coal burner and we were covered with cinders and black from the smoke. It was some fast trip back. We all drew new clothes here the next day and are fitted out, but have not got a complete outfit. We have been used fine and are in a good place. We have liberty every night from four-thirty until nine-thirty, and Sunday at one o'clock.

"Now, do not worry over my safety as we are well taken care of and I am in the best of health. With love to you and Ma and Nellie, I remain.

"Your loving husband, George.

"U. S. S. Carola, U. S. Naval Force, European Waters."

Big Cross Country Flight by Dozen U. S. Airmen

New York, Aug. 8.—Twelve aviators from Hazelhurst Field, Hempstead, L. I., made up of officers from the First Provisional Wing, left yesterday for Dayton, O. They go to take part in what probably will be the greatest cross-country flight ever conducted in any country. The flight will cover all the principal cities of the central Western States, and give the people there the benefit of seeing what is being done by aviators. They will be given an idea of just what becomes of their money and do away with distrust.

The trip was planned by the division of military aeronautics, represented by Colonels Arnold and Kinney, working with the committee on public information, represented by Captain Ruble.

SLEEP IN BEDS WHEN BOCHE PERMITS

U. S. Boys Find Wine Cellar Convenient at Times. Writes Boston Boy

With a post card as souvenir of "a good Boche"—meaning, of course, a dead German—Sergeant George S. McConnell sends an entertaining letter full of sidelights on "the big fight," to his brother-in-law, William H. Davis of Dewey square, this city. The post card was taken from the person of a German soldier killed in battle, and contains greetings from some of his friends in other regiments. It is written in German script.

Sergeant McConnell is in the Headquarters Company of the 104th United States Infantry. He was formerly with Company M of the Eighth Regiment. He is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth McConnell of No. 99 Porter street, Somerville. His letter to Mr. Davis follows:

Somewhere in a wine cellar,
July 10, 1918.

"Hello, Bill!

"How is every little thing? Good, I hope. What do you think of the place I am in? I suppose you think I am having a time; well, I am not. It's empty (that is, of wine), but crowded with fellows. We are in an old French farm house just near the lines, and they all have wine cellars in them, thank God. It's a wonderful place to duck into when they are tossing those big wash boilers over at us.

"You would laugh if you could see us. We live, eat, drink and sleep in feather beds (when the Boche lets us), but it's hard telling when a attack of daylight will come through the walls, or our front yard be blown to pieces, and when we hear one come whining through the air there is one big jam in the hall, all making for the wine cellar. Not a fellow opens his yap until he knows every one is safe, then all you can hear is a nervous little giggle. Say, it's a scream.

"Say, Bill, I thought you might like a souvenir taken from a good Boche, you know what kind of a Boche that is. I got it up here at the big fight with a few more, but they will never miss them, so I guess it will be all right even though it hasn't your name on it, he will never claim it.

"Well, Bill, this war is some war, but since this division that us Americans were sent to stop (and we stopped it) has been going on, it's our motto, it's our old-line open fighting, and believe me, the Boche paid dear after we were sent in, and before we are through he is going to pay a sight more. We have gained quite a little ground lately and taken machine guns, big guns and plenty of prisoners.

"The Boche is sick of fighting the Yanks already. They say they were told they had nothing to fear from us, we were only untrained soldiers, but they are giving themselves up every day, and tell us they are discouraged because every time they have been sent against us they have been given a darned good beating, so what's the use? They all think it will be over soon.

"Well, Bill, they have stopped throwing over the wash tubs, so guess I will go out and see what damage they have done; also try and feed my face. So long for a while.

"George.

DON'T WED A SLACKER, SOLDIER'S WORD TO GIRLS

Fourmile, Mo., Aug. 8. — Private Eugene Henson, Eighteenth Infantry, A. E. F., who was killed in action in the western front, recently wrote a letter to Superintendent of Schools C. E. Ouch here, in which he said: "Tell the girls to hate slackers and then marry one. We are in the fight with hell-freeze over, and right now we're getting ready to go in and show them a little of the 'spirit of '76.'"

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and preparations contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and spoils it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary unbleached cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely separate from all the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will usually be enough to cleanse it thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, luxuriantly fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get unrefined cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

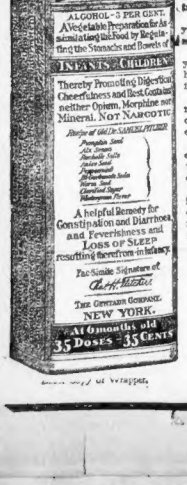
Save the Babies

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupify, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.



Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the treatment of children's complaints.

Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory.

Dr. H. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

COBB WILL SHOULDER A GUN

Xing Tyrus Tells Hugh Fullerton He Will Enlist as Soon as Baseball Season is Over

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Ty Cobb has announced that he is done with baseball when he takes off the old dirt grimed "unie" this Fall.

He is going to give his famous cleve, the tattered one with the palm cut out, to the Red Cross; present his bats to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus and go into war service.

Cobb will quit with the greatest record ever made by any player and, after setting a pace, which will unit a long time for some superman to approach.

There is much misunderstanding regarding Cobb, based largely upon the fact that, when he came into the big show, he had an idea everyone was against him and it was necessary to whip them to hold his own.

I used to think he was the limit for swelled head and "cheek," and it required years for me to believe that what I mistook for these elements was simply the most wonderful confidence I have ever known anyone to possess.

Cobb's career, leading the American League in batting every year, save the one in which Speaker went wild and beat him out, leading it in base running, and, in fact, leading it in almost everything, is a wonderful example of the power of self-confidence.

RED SOX TACKLE TIGERS TODAY IN FINAL

Detroit, Aug. 7—The 11-8 walloping the Red Sox received from the Tigers in the second game of the set on Hugh Jennings' lawn didn't sting very much, as over in Cleveland the Senators took a most obliging fall out of the Indians.

Joe Fohl's family is the only one wearing the Red Sox any worry, and Ed Barrow and his cohorts have Jim Shaw and Walter Johnson to thank for retaining their old lead of three and one-half lengths in the pennant race.

The Red Sox depart for home tonight. Today's matinee is their last stand in the West and they must bag it in order to run up better than a .500 notch for the season. The score is 7-2, with this encounter the deciding one.

It was Bullet Joe Bush whom the Tigers bombarded. They found him for six runs in the first and one in the second. Then he retired in favor of Pertica, former Coast Leaguer. He showed fair form, but gave way to Leach-hitter in the sixth, and Kinney, formerly of Dallas, wound up. He was pounded in the eighth.

Cobb had a big day. Up four times, the king poled three hits, one a double, and tallied four runs. Veach, Jamie Bush and Griggs also hit sarshly.

GALA NAVAL CLASH AT BRAVES FIELD SUNDAY

FORMER CLUB OWNER PANS MAGNATES

"The major league magnates are acting like school children," said a former club owner today.

"They are howling about closing up their ball parks when they should be trying to find ways and means to perpetuate the game.

"Secretary Baker hasn't ordered them to bar their gates on September 1. He has simply exempted certain players from the 'work or fight' order until that day, when the local draft boards will assume control of the situation.

"Mr. Baker is in favor of keeping the game alive and probably expects the magnates to alter conditions so that the teams can remain in action until the first day of October.

"If the magnates are sensible they will engage other players who are not in the draft ages and will sensibly try to save the pastime, which the public will patronize as soon as the atmosphere is clear.

"The idea of winding up any business because skilled employes are taken away is decidedly poor policy. Baseball can be rebuilt."

CORBETT'S CORNER

BY JAMES J. CORBETT

Jack Dempsey's victory over Fred Fulton stamps him as the most sensational heavyweight since Jim Jeffries' time and ranks him as among the greatest since the mitt game began.

Some persons, every ready with their mallets, have tried to prove that Dempsey's triumph over Fulton was a "bung," a "false alarm," and other things of the same brand in an effort to show that Dempsey's achievement is not to be ranked as a wonderful one.

They are the ones who, in prefight conversation, insisted that "Fulton will kill that Colorado boke."

I have been interested in pugilism for nearly thirty-five years—an era that has known all the greatest battlers pugilism has produced. And I can frankly say that no man ever has eclipsed Dempsey's almost unbelievable victory over Fulton.

A few men have knocked out rivals in less time than it took Dempsey to turn the trick, but no heavyweight is listed among them.

The knockouts that were accomplished by fighters in less than twenty-three seconds were only three or four in number. And all were accomplished by men over-opponents of their own size and weight.

DEMPSEY A REAL BATTLER.

Not one of them faced a foe twenty pounds heavier and five inches taller, who had been ranked as a possible champion and put him away in twenty-three seconds.

Sullivan was great; so was Fitz; so was Jim Jeffries. During their careers they took on all-comers—many of them duds who knew almost nothing about the art of fighting.

They were the "easiest picking" one could conceive. Yet I fail to recall that any of the trio put to sleep even one of those duds in less than twenty-three seconds. Yet it took Dempsey only that length of time to drop into oblivion a ringman who, at the same time, is one of the biggest men that ever jumped through the ropes.

Doesn't that, in itself, stamp Dempsey as truly great?

Some persons are so constructed that they find pleasure only in knocking. To give a man his just due is foreign to their make-up. They hamstring everybody and everything. And just now they are attempting to spoof Dempsey's triumph over Fulton.

RANKED NEXT TO WILLARD.

Dempsey has been a particular target ever since he appeared along the pugilistic horizon. Earlier in the year when he began to send foes into oblivion with a few punches, the scoffers insisted that all of his foes were "setups."

"Wait until he tackles a tough one—then good night Dempsey."

So Dempsey, after whipping everyone who cared to try conclusions with him, was brought face to face with Fulton. The plasterer had assembled a rather imposing record.

He had knocked out Frank Moran, the man who wasn't stopped by either Jack Johnson or Jess Willard. Fulton knocked out Sam Langford and a dozen others who were considered fairly good heavyweights.

Fulton, on the day he met Dempsey, was ranked next to Willard. He was the toughest foe that any man with championship aspirations could be called upon to face.

BRAVES DEPART AFTER FROLIC WITH CARDS

By NICK FLATLEY.

The Braves bid fare -ll to Bost today, playing their final game in the Cardinals.

Having beaten said western twice, the members of the Tribe now sure that they cannot descend to the cellar are the abbreviated season runs to course. They now have aspirations of climbing higher.

The team is playing good ball now more, getting regular pitching, plenty of hitting when t comes, Ivy Smith, who indulged in a 30-day slump while the team was losing many of its regular stars, has come back. His bat has been responsible for three extra-inning games within a fortnight.

Red's triple in the third scored two Boston runs, while his double in the eleventh ended the fray and gave the Stallings stars a 4 to 3 victory.

Ol' Doc Crandall, who was a star years and years ago, did the pitching and went all the way.

Art Nehf was listed for today's finale, with venerable Lem Ames opposing him. Then the Braves go West and the Red Sox return to prove that the Cleveland Indians cannot get up to them.

This Interesting Picture Show Is Being Produced at the Best Theatres in the Country

By Ann Lisle

(Copyright, 1918, Marion Davies Film Co., Inc.)

HARRY Twombly stood to Cecilia's brother as the supreme example of all he wanted to be. Polished, elegant, completely sure of himself, man of the world and recognized by that world—the surface qualities that marked Twombly "aristocratic" were the ones which appealed to Johnny.

Of the deeper qualities which marked him man the boy had no conception. Now all he knew was ashamed before his hero. The boy cringed away from his own thoughts.

"So, Dickson, we've taken you this time. You're a pretty smooth criminal my man, and the State has felt for a long time that New York air would be purer if you weren't breathing it."

"Cut out the sermons and get down to business," sneered Dickson.

"All right—get down to business, Conroy," ordered Twombly, and the detective slipped a pair of chastened bracelets over Dickson's wrists.

Dolly was cowering away in horror. Her life seemed fairly crumpling about her feet.

"And I think we'd better take the little one, too, don't you, chief? She might be lonesome operating all by herself," suggested the detective.

"Dop! take her—she's only a girl," pleaded Johnny.

"Yes, boy, only a girl, but pretty old in the game. She'll have to go, too. And if these people had persuaded you to force your father's name or the name of the other clever little tricks they know how to train people in you might be going along, and no one cold save you," said the detective succinctly.

Johnny groaned. Twombly's lips tightened grimly at the sound. The youngster was frightened, in a blue funk—Cecilia's brother a coward! The District Attorney did not like that.

"Take your prisoners down in my car, Conroy. I'll follow with my friend here."

Room Is Swept

A moment later the room was swept clear of all its suddenly tragic figures save only two, a boy and a man, facing him grimly, accusingly. There was silence between them, silence which Johnny longed, yet dreaded to hear the older man break. When he could bear it no further the boy spoke.

"What do you think of me, Twombly?"

"What do you think of yourself?"

"I'd hate to tell you." There was no flicker of a smile on Johnny's face as he spoke. "I think I've been about the worst young fool I ever want to met. Does Cecilia know?"

"We won't ask her how much she knows or guesses. here are some things, John, that men don't discuss with a woman. If Cecilia wonders a bit about brother's wild oats, that we can't help. But we don't have to show her the crop, do we, old man?"

The elder man looked at the boy, and a compact was suddenly sealed between them. Jonny felt that out of his strange welter of blundering and stumbling he had managed to get a friend.

"You don't despise me, then?" asked the boy.

The man crossed to bieside and put a strong arm around the shrinking shoulders.

"John," he said, "I've always thought you were pretty good stuff the same good stuff your father is made of. I'm expecting you to prove it some day."

"The money came too fast; it—it kind of raddled my brain," said Johnny seriously. "Perhaps I would have been a better sort if—if I were back where my father began, laying bricks. I thought he was just common; nobody in particular, sort of to be looked down on. Maybe it's that right to be called just common."

"Jeremiah Madden's every uncommon sort, John. Does not see that? Look how far he's travelled from the bricklaying day and how simple he stays. Your dad has the heart of a child on the soul of a giant, even if he does tuck his napkin into his collar."

Johnny's Confession

Johnny winced, then smiled. Now that his trouble was named in words it did not seem quite so terrible.

"I s'pose there are worse things than tucking napkins in collars, but I'm always afraid that the fellows I meet won't understand. I don't want them to put me down as just nothing more than to see my father drinking beer out of a pail with his workmen."

"The right sort of fellow won't. You and I are the right sort of fellows, John. We se that your father is the real thin even if he does like pipes better than two perfectos he's always buying for other people. Everyboy has some little difficulty to face in the world. You have your own snobbishness. You want to fight thatdown, boy, so it won't hurt the finest old chap I've ever met, my faser-in-law-to-be."

A Thrilling Story of an American Girl and German Intrigue in This Country

What Has Gone Before

A beautiful American girl, Pamela Van Teyl, goes to a London restaurant with Captain Holderness and John Lutchester, where they meet a Mr. Fischer, an American, and Molly Holderness, and later young Captain Graham, nicknamed Sandy, who tells them all in loud tones of a wonderful discovery he has made in explosives. The other men hush him up and he goes upstairs to lay aside his hat. He fails to reappear, nor can any trace be found of him. Hassan, one of the servants in the restaurant, rouses the suspicion of Pamela, as do the actions of the Negro band leader. She gains the key to the chapel where she suspects Graham to be confined.

Now Go On With the Story

"TO follow Fischer?" Graham repeated vaguely.

"Precisely. If he thinks the formula is in England, Fischer will stay in England. If he thinks that it has gone abroad, he will go abroad. If we leave him free we can watch which he does."

Graham swallowed half a wineglassful of the brandy by his side. Then he leaned forward.

"Look here," he said, "you'll forgive me if I repeat myself and ask you once more—what the h—— has all this got to do with you?"

"Just this much," Lutchester replied, "that I insist upon your taking the course of action in this matter which I propose."

"You mean," Graham protested, working himself gradually into a state of wrath, "that I am to go back to my rooms as though nothing had happened, see Holderness and the others tomorrow, and not have a word of explanation to offer? That I am to leave those blackguards at Henry's to try their dirty games on some one else, and for Fischer, the man who was fully inclined to become my murderer, go away unharmed? I think not, Mr. Lutchester. I am much obliged for your help, but you are talking piffle."

"What do you propose to do, then?"

To Scotland Yard

"I am going round to Scotland Yard myself!"

Lutchester rose to his fee:

"Stay where you are for a minute, please," he begged.

He passed into a smaller room and Graham could hear faintly the sound of the telephone. In a minute or two his host returned.

"Go in there and speak, Graham," he invited. "You will find some one you know at the other end."

Graham did as he was bidden, and Lutchester closed the door after him. For a few minutes the latter sat in his chair, smoking quietly, his eyes fixed upon the fire. Then his unwilling guest reappeared. He came into the room a little unsteadily and looked with new eyes at the man who seemed so unaccountably to have taken hold of poor quality in the affairs.

"I don't understand all this," he muttered. "Who the devil are you, anyway, Lutchester?"

"A very ordinary person, I can assure You," was the quiet reply. "However, you are satisfied, I suppose, that my advice is best?"

"Yes, I am satisfied." Graham answered nervously. "You know that—that I'm under arrest?"

Lutchester nodded.

"Well, you're not asking for my sympathy, I suppose?" he observed drily.

The young man flushed.

"I know that I behaved like a fool," he admitted. "All the same, I've been working night and day for weeks on this problem. I have, in every sense, been up to it once. I must say I think they seem inclined to be a little hard on me."

"No one has time to be in the least hard on you," Lutchester assured him. "You have committed a frightful indiscretion, and all that is asked of you now is to keep your mouth shut. If you do that, I think a way will be found for you out of your troubles."

"But what is to become of me?" Graham demanded.

Fresh Experiments

"I understand that you are to be taken to Buckinghamshire tomorrow," Lutchester informed him. "There you will be allowed every facility for fresh experiments. In the meantime you are promised to give you a shakedown here for the night. You will find a soldier on guard outside your door, but you can treat him as your servant."

"You are very kind," Graham faltered, but

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

To acquire physical fitness and staying power for the great race to be held in the Charles River Basin Saturday afternoon, August 24, in connection with the fourteenth annual swimming carnival of the Boston AMERICAN, a number of the girls who have entered their names as contestants are taking practice swims at the various beaches in and about Boston.

The Swimming Editor wishes to congratulate these young women for this commendable move, and feels assured that their participation in the coming race will add great weight to its success and prove beyond cavil or doubt the popularity of such an undertaking to encourage body building and health producing effects.

The action of these girls in taking practice swims should be an incentive to vigorous action on the part of others to do likewise.

"The necessary physical fitness and staying power are acquired, not only by steady swimming practice, but by the strictest care of the health," says a well-known woman swimmer.

PRIZES TO FIRST FIVE.

"Begin with a short distance swim and gradually increase it to one mile," she adds. "When you can do a mile easily, do it and have some record kept of your time. Then try to lower the record by doing the distance repeatedly."

Remember, girls, the AMERICAN swim is one and one-half miles and 880 feet. It has the sanction of the New England Amateur Athletic Association. Send in your entries at once.

Handsome prizes will be awarded the first five winners and a suitable medal will be given to each other contestant who finishes. The winner of the first prize will be adjudged the New England amateur champion swimmer.

Tentative rules, subject to changes by the officials in charge of the race, have been made. All starters will take the standing start from the Park Commission's float, opposite the Union Boat Clubhouse on the Boston Esplanade, proceed up stream to the stake boat, leave it to the left, and return down stream to the starting point. The start will be by pistol.

'NED' FRENCH TO SHOW METTLE IN TANKS

Husband of "Tot" Harrington, Telephone Operator, Enlists as Private in U. S. Corps

Edward Tuck ("Ned") French of New York and Newport, whose sadly complicated marital affairs have compelled to keep him in the limelight recently, has found surcease for sorrow in enlisting as a private in the United States Tank Corps. The recently married husband of "Tot" Harrington, the Manchester, N. H., telephone operator, who left her husband twice within ten days of the date of their marriage, passed a perfect physical examination, tipping the scales at 174 pounds. He is 5feet 11¾ inches in height.

French told a recruiting officer that he was anxious to get to the front as soon as possible in order to prove his mettle and to show his friends and relatives that he was made of the real stuff. He was accompanied to the Tank Corps recruiting office by Charles A. Bamrick of New York, a near friend.

Two of French's brothers are already in the service. Lieutenant Stuyvesant French, U. S. A., is stationed at Spartanburg, S. C., while another brother, Lieut. John Ormond French, is chief petty officer in the U. S. Naval Reserve at New London, Ct.

Mrs. French, who was "Tot" Harrington until both the husband's enlistment, according to her attorneys, Phipps, Swurgin & Cook of No. 185 Devonshire street, "it would be most unpatriotic for Mrs. French to take any action which would prevent her husband from doing his duty to his country at this time," declared Mr. Phipps.

French will remain at Chester, N. H., for a few days before going to Fort Slocum, N. Y., for training in the Tank Corps.

Boston Terrier Saved From Drowning by Dog Chum

"Prince" is just a plain, ordinary dog owned by Matthew O'Hara of Rochdale.

"Prince" had one inseparable friend, a little Boston terrier owned by John F. Kennedy of Dale street, Rochdale. Yesterday the two dog chums, their tongues panting from the heat, were seen to go swimming together in the French river by several employes of the American Woolen Mill.

After a while the dogs tired of their play in the water and swam for the bank. "Prince" reached it first, clambered up on the grass and shook himself dry. Turning to look for his chum, he saw the terrier floundering exhausted, unable to climb the steep bank.

With a yelp of encouragement, "Prince" leaped into the river, fastened his teeth in the terrier's collar and pulled him safely to the bank and up on the grass.

Today when "Prince" started on his daily run along the town, people pointed him out as the hero of a drowning rescue and several of the Rochdale housewives managed to leave a tasty little delicacy on the back door step for "the dog that saved his chum's life."

DEMOCRACY — BOSTON, THURSDAY, AUG. 8, 1918. — LIBERTY

SNAKE CHARMER A ROOKIE AT DEVENS

Minister, Chinaman, Valet and George Washington Also in the Ranks

Camp Devens, Ayer, Aug. 8.—George Washington is among the recruits and William Penn Franklin, a Virginia snake charmer, is quartered with the Southern delegation.

Aliens arriving in the last draft are being registered for naturalization, and those of former arrivals who have not taken the oath of allegiance and are desirous to do so will be accepted at a special sitting of the United States Court to be held in camp.

MINISTER IN THE RANKS.

Charles McRes of Cleveland, an ordained minister in the Presbyterian church, who could not resist the army, is a private in A Company, 74th Regiment, having been transferred from the 42d Regiment, in which he enlisted last April. He saw two terms in the Marine Corps, taking his theological course at the Washington University between each.

Thomas Bade Williams, former valet for Percy Rockefeller, at Greenwich, Ct., is also in the same company.

Yee Bak Wak, a Chinaman from Milford who gives his occupation as a carpenter and laundryman, has been received and is working with the members of the seventeenth company.

Undertakers are plentiful in camp, as eleven were received in the last quotas, but they have not had a case since their arrival.

The first hut of the Jewish Welfare Board to be erected in camp was dedicated today with ceremonies at which officers from the national headquarters in New York and the Boston board attended with guests from the camp and outside.

Dr. David DeSola Poole of New York offered the opening prayer and accepted the keys from Carl Dreyfus, member of the Boston committee. Speeches were also made by secretaries from the other camp organizations, and music was furnished by the depot brigade band. The building will be in charge of Abraham Rosenstein and Louis Spector.

DENTAL INFIRMARY OPENED.

The new dental infirmary which will take care of about 300 patients a day has been opened near the Liberty Theatre under the direction of Captain G. D. Cassidy of Houlton, Me. Dental chairs of the latest type have been installed on the two floors with twelve in the infirmary and eight for extraction. Twenty-five operators will work during the day and two will be on call at night for emergency cases.

Sergeants Leland C. Allen, Hugh L. Garrity and John P. Flanders of the medical detachment, base hospital, have been promoted to second lieutenants and assigned for duty with the sanitary corps.

Arrangements are being made by Mrs. C. C. Smith, wife of Colonel Smith of the 302nd regiment, now with the 76th division, for a lawn party on the estate of Mrs. Cresswell Leonard at Groton on August 15 for the benefit of the war camp community service.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal church, will speak tonight in Y. M. C. A. hut 25.

PRAISE OF THE TANK.

London (by mail).—The praises of the tanks are sung by Sergeant Richard C. Colburn, as follows:

Oh, she's nothin' sweet to look at an' no stranger to steer,
She ain't none of Sandy, that's a cinch
She hobbles like Maly Jumpin' when she's foller
ing Nick's a spree.

But she's sure a lever-dewy in a pinch.
Just load her straight for Berlin and no matter what the road,
Or whether it's just ten inches, trees and mud,
And I'll guarantee she'll get there with her precious burden
And her treads a-drippin' red with German blood.

Oh, you tank! tank! tank!
She's a grouch, she's a dream, she's a dream!
Where this star-shell's are slightin' up the darkest of the night.
She'll be sailin' like a demon through the

LIGHTNING HITS RADIO SCHOOL BUILDING

Bolt Tears Hole in Roof of Holyoke House, Ensigns' Headquarters

By S. HARRY FERRIS

U. S. Naval Radio School at Cambridge, Aug. 8.—The headquarters of the Ensigns' School in historic old Holyoke House in Harvard square were struck by a bolt of lightning that tore a hole through the roof and badly damaged the building.

Some of the boys were more seriously frightened than they are likely to be by future German shells, but none was severely injured.

Next week the Radio School will take possession of its new quarters on Cambridge Common. The numerous buildings will thereafter house a larger population than a considerable portion of the towns of New England.

Commanding Officer Ayer announces that the formal dedication will not take place for two or three weeks. Before this happens a suitable name should be provided. The Common Barracks, as the place is now called, does not meet with general approval.

The boys of the school are invited to send in to the AMERICAN their ideas of what the name should be. They will be submitted to Captain Ayer to make a selection before the day of dedication.

Some of the suggestions received are:

Hunstown.
Radio Green.
Ayer Villas.

The "Y" but has passed out of control of Superintendent Arthur Beane, of Phillips Brooks House, and is now being managed by the War Council of the National Y. M. C. A. The workers in a few days will exchange their civilian dress for the army khaki.

Chester Ames, formerly on board the Receiving Ship at Commonwealth Pier, will be the office secretary. William Merrill and H. H. Magwood, formerly at the Watertown Arsenal, will be assistant secretaries and C. J. Neffinger will have charge of the social department.

The acceptance of invitations for dances and other entertainments for the Radio boys will hereafter be in the hands of the Hostess Committee with headquarters at the Little Building. The sources of all invitations will be carefully investigated before they are placed before the sailors.

COLORED TROOPS AT CAMP WANT A PIANO

3,600 of Them from Florida to Be Organized into a New Battalion

Camp Devens, Ayer, Aug. 8.—Officers and men of the 12th division are in a quandary as to their commanding general, and while many rumors have been spread over camp as to the new leader for the men now training for overseas, none of the camp officers will make known the name of the appointee.

The names of several field officers now acting as departmental heads at Washington and in cantonments have been named but the appointments thus far to organizing divisions have been officers of experience at the front who have been recalled and assigned to the training camps.

Of the 2,600 Florida negroes received for organization into a new battalion, 585 have been given the physical examination with the result that 81 have been rejected as unfit for overseas service, but several will be accepted for domestic service and will be held in the army.

All Florida men have been examined for insurance accepted the policies and 451 applied for the maximum of $10,000 while the remainder took out certificates for $5,000.

The band of soldiers have been enjoying themselves with musical instruments they brought with them but are searching for pianos and patriotic organizations are being urged to supply the instruments.

Cabaret singers, waiters and chauffeurs make the greatest part of the Boston contingent which arrived last week and faces familiar to visitors to hotels, clubs and automobile inns are training for service.

The Boston men are in great demand for entertainments and are arranging several minstrel shows with jazz accompaniments.

WALTHAM OFFERS WORK TO MAIMED FIGHTERS

Secretary John Shay of the Waltham Chamber of Commerce has offered to find work in Waltham for maimed soldiers and sailors. Major A. C. Monahan of the U. S. Sanitary Corps of the National Army at Washington has answered the offer and stated that while there are none at present needing work the situation may be different later. Members of the Chamber of Commerce are acting on behalf of the officials of the factories, which make watches, small parts and jewelry.

RECRUITING FOR MARINE CORPS BREAKS RECORD

Recruiting for the Marine Corps has gone "over the top." Last month more than 200 signed up. This is the largest number in the history of the Marine Corps. Lieutenant Bernard J. Doherty, recruiting officer, makes a special plea for young men between the ages of 17 to 21. "This service is educational in a way. Men never stand still while in the service of the Marine Corps," he says.

SERVICE MEN DODGE HEAT AT ALLERTON

The hot weather is driving many service men on furlough and brief liberties to the South Shore Service Club, which is maintained at Allerton for soldiers and sailors by the Boston War Camp Community Service and the Special Aid Society.

Over sixty marines and soldiers from Fort Revere and Fort Andrews enjoyed a service dance arranged by the local committees from Allerton and Hingham.

NEW NATIONAL PARTY SEEKS WALSH'S VIEWS

A committee representing the new National Party, which met last night at the Women's City Club, will confer with Ex-Governor David I. Walsh to ascertain his position on the questions of the day. If the former Governor's ideas appear to accord with the National Party's program there is a feeling in the organization that Mr. Walsh will receive the party's endorsement for Senator.

The committee, which consists of Dr. George W. Nasmith, John S. Codman, Chester R. Lawrence and Demarest Lloyd, was also empowered to wait on the Democratic candidate for Governor, Richard H. Long, and secure a statement of his views.

ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

STATUE OF JOAN DECORATED BY K. OF C.

Simple but Impressive Ceremony Takes Place Simultaneously in N. Y. and Paris

New York, Aug. 8.—The annual convention of the Knights of Columbus was formally closed here today when the cross of Lorraine in flowers was placed upon the statue of Joan of Arc at Riverside Drive at Ninety-third street, in recognition of the close ties between America and France.

Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty and officers of the supreme board participated in the simple but impressive ceremony, which was being duplicated in Paris practically at the same minute.

The feature of the closing sessions of the convention was an address by Raymond D. Fosdick, United States Commissioner on War Camp Activities, the only non-member who has ever addressed a Knights of Columbus convention.

Mr. Fosdick, in the course of his address, gave his unqualified endorsement to the suggestion made by the Knights that all war camp organizations should work together in raising funds for their war.

SAW MISS GO "OVER TOP."

"I have just returned from overseas," he said. "Over there I had an opportunity of witnessing the effect of keeping up the morale and physical efficiency of our men. I saw the fellows at Chateau Thierry going over the top singing 'Hail, Hail, the Gang's all Here.'

"They held that line that night in spite of the desperate efforts of the Germans to dislodge them. It was this kind of morale the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A., the Jewish Welfare Leaders and others are putting into our men who will be returned to their homes just as good as when they went into the fight."

"When General Pershing comes back with his men from France he will bring the hearts and affections of 50,000,000 Frenchmen because of the stamp of American manliness and the imprint of American ideals on them.

"To contribute to that end is your glorious privilege as Knights of Columbus and the very effort which you are taking hold of the task will render everlasting commendation."

BUILD HUT IN RUINS.

In addition to Mr. Fosdick, the delegates listened to addresses by M. Marcel Knecht, member of the French high commission; M. Jorde D'Arere, "the fighting priest of Paris," who has been twice decorated by the French government and is in this country on a special mission, and Alber Vanbleck, professor of the University of Lorraine and member of the Belgian mission on industrial management.

Messages of loyalty were sent to President Wilson, General Pershing, Marshal Foch, Ambassador Jusserand at Washington, and his holiness, Pope Benedict.

A cable was read from Secretary Payne at the Knights of Columbus headquarters at Paris, telling of the establishment of a K. of C. club in the Chateau Thierry ruins and of the new of commissions for Chaplains Boucher of Fall River and DeVaill of New Bedford as a recognition of their bravery under fire.

LUKE E. HART ELECTED.

Luke E. Hart, former supreme knight of the order, will leave within a few days to take his post as resident director of the war activities.

Daniel J. Gallagher of Boston nominated John E. Hart of St. Louis, State deputy of Missouri, for the board of supreme directors and Mr. Hart was elected, as were William F. Larkin, New York; William J. Mulligan, Thompsonville, Ct., and John F. Martin, Green Bay, Wis.

NEW METHODIST SECT FOUNDED IN SYRACUSE

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 8.—A new religious denomination known as the American Evangelical Methodist Church, has been founded here by Rev. C. A. Ingalls. A large edifice is to be erected for the new sect, and churches will be built also in other cities of the State. Rev. Mr. Ingalls was formerly a real estate operator at Crown Point. Objectors to the new denomination believe the sect to be an offshoot of the so-called Holy Rollers.

Plan to Discontinue Wheat Substitute Requirements

Washington, Aug. 8.—The National Food Administration, which released housewives and public eating houses from wheatless pledges ten days ago, is expecting word from Administrator Hoover, now in conference with the food administrators of the Allies, which may make it possible to discontinue the requirements for the purchase of wheat substitutes with flour.

The requirements are still in effect, but the Food Administration hopes to get on a straight "liberty bread" basis shortly.

Many instances have been reported where wealthy people bought double the amount of flour they should have purchased, donating the equal amount of substitutes they were forced to buy with it to charity, and still have their usual flour requirements. The Food Administration regards these "philanthropists" as disloyal.

GERMAN DIARY SHOWS FOE IS LOSING HEART

Ford Finds Signs of Waning Faith in a Prisoner's Writings

By BERT FORD.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 7 (4 P. M.)—Evidence of dissatisfaction in the German ranks is accumulating daily, and the army's military morale has passed the zenith and is on the toboggan, according to opinion of military experts. The turning of the tide came with the allied counter offensive on the Marne.

But it is a mistake, they say, that the Boche is defeated, war experts say. The enemy still has strong punches left but he is fattening under the allied blows.

Germany's strength is declining weekly as the man-power and resources of the allies grow and Americans arriving on the western front in increasing numbers.

The Germans are losing confidence. Extracts taken from the diary of a captured German officer form a chorus of complaints. He declared he was getting mean in the late draft with hardly any training and that the people at home were taking things horribly easy."

While the German was writing these words allied airplanes were dropping bombs on German ammunition dumps, railway junctions and troop concentrations, but in an appearance to give battle.

One of the chief complaints was about the lack of sleep. And it was declared that German aviators themselves admit the superiority of the allies in the sky. The diary continues:

"In the Tommy we call the trench inspector drops two bombs every morning, regularly disturbing the mess. He is a handful of manikins hold off a stout enemy.

"The Americans never learn common sense. We have lost our best men and those that are left cannot be trusted. There are many shirkers. It has been enough to break the heart to see the fine fellows go down."

CHINESE CASKET PICKED UP BY FISHING CREW

A Chinese burial casket, according to members of the crew who have been in the Orient, was brought in today to the fish pier by the fishing schooner Edward F. Black, Captain Gowdy. It was picked up off George's Banks several days ago, Captain Gowdy stated, first the cover, which members of the crew saw floating nearby, and two days later the box, which was hauled on board. It would seem to have been designed for a person of large frame.

Let Us Have Free Public Fish Markets

They Would Prevent Any Such Financiering as Was Disclosed in the Fish Trust Investigation

One of the unpleasant disclosures of the Fish Trust investigation so vigorously conducted by Representative J. Weston Allen last Winter was the part taken by a leading Boston bank, or perhaps it would be more exact to say by its chief executive officers, in supplying the New York promoter who organized the trust with the cash required to consummate the deal.

President Hallett of the Fourth National Bank, with a ready frankness which seemed to indicate that he saw nothing in the transaction properly open to adverse comment, told the investigating committee that he personally, with the backing of two other officers of the bank, loaned Promoter Dyer $62,000 for use in the preliminary negotiations before the new Bay State Fishing Company was organized and in shape to make it a banking proposition, and that when the deal was at the final stage the bank certified for Mr. Dyer a check for $520,000, a credit based in part upon his demand note for $250,000. It did not appear in the testimony before the committee that Mr. Hallett took any active part in securing for Mr. Dyer this latter loan, but it was established by Mr. Hallett's own statement that in return for his financial assistance in the form of the original $62,000 loan, afterward repaid with interest, he was given shares in the new company of a par value of $200,000, on which he has since been drawing dividends of $12,000 a year.

It is difficult to speak in measured terms of transactions like these, and yet it is a matter of common knowledge that all the great monopolies which are taxing the people to create a few hundred mushroom multi-millionaires have been made possible by just such special, and especially rewarded, assistance from the men controlling the immense funds held in trust by our banks, insurance companies and other reservoirs of money and credit. Mr. Hallett must have known that the legality of such combinations as the one in the formation of which he was an indispensable actor and a large beneficiary had often been questioned, and that, whether legal or not, its expected profits could only be derived by artificially enhancing the cost of a prime necessary of life; but the very sangfroid with which he acknowledged the deal, and his inability to see anything out of the way in it, is only an unconscious testimony to the universality of such practices among the leaders of high finance.

The whole matter is now in the hands of Attorney-General Attwill, who may be trusted to do all in his power to prosecute any violations of law that may have been committed in this particular case. The lawbreakers, if there have been any, should be and doubtless will be handled without fear or favor. BUT BETTER THAN ANY PUNITIVE MEASURES, which after all usually accomplish little more than locking the stable door after the horse is stolen, IS THE GREAT PREVENTIVE MEASURE OF COMPETITION BY PUBLIC TRADING which has now been made possible by the constitutional amendment adopted last year. The city of Cleveland, some years ago, broke up a fish dealers' combine AND REDUCED PRICES TO THE CONSUMER MORE THAN FIFTY PER CENT. by establishing a free public fish market with subsidiary local branches. The Legislature of 1919 could not start its Winter's work better than by following Cleveland's example.

Let us have a free wholesale market on Commonwealth Pier, and let the city and town governments be authorized to open municipal fish markets also whenever there is reason to believe that either wholesalers or retailers are exacting for their services as middlemen more than the service is reasonably worth.

District Attorney Tufts Right in Parole Case

District Attorney Tufts of Middlesex County has thought it necessary to make a public defence of his causing to be brought back from Florida to Massachusetts for trial a fugitive from justice who had enlisted in the Aviation Corps under an assumed name and was at a training camp in the former State. The young man, it seems, is a professional burglar, four times caught in the act and already three times convicted, who would be now serving a prison sentence if he had not twice been released on parole, each time using his recovered liberty to resume at once his predatory career. The District Attorney is right in saying that criminals of this unrepentant type are not wanted by the government or by anyone else as associates of the splendid young men enrolled in the Aviation Corps or any other branch of the service.

District Attorney "Nate" Tufts could well have afforded to leave it to his many friends in Eastern Massachusetts to defend him against any imputations upon the uniform good judgment, impartiality and thoroughness with which the duties of this and other public offices which he has held have always been discharged. But how about our Parole Board? Do they not owe the people some explanation of their conduct in turning loose a second time to prey upon the public a convict who had already by violating the conditions of his first parole proved himself entirely unworthy of clemency and unfit to be at large?

VISITING YOUR FRIENDS ON SUNDAYS

What about it—those frequent week-end or over-Sunday visits to your friends who live in the suburban towns?

Of course, that hail-fellow-well-met has invited you to come any time and has assured you that you will be "always welcome," but do you suppose his wife is in favor of company every Sunday?

Well, she isn't.

She looks forward to Sunday—and she has a right to do so—as a time when she may take life easy, and you are not playing square with her if you help to spoil her plans.

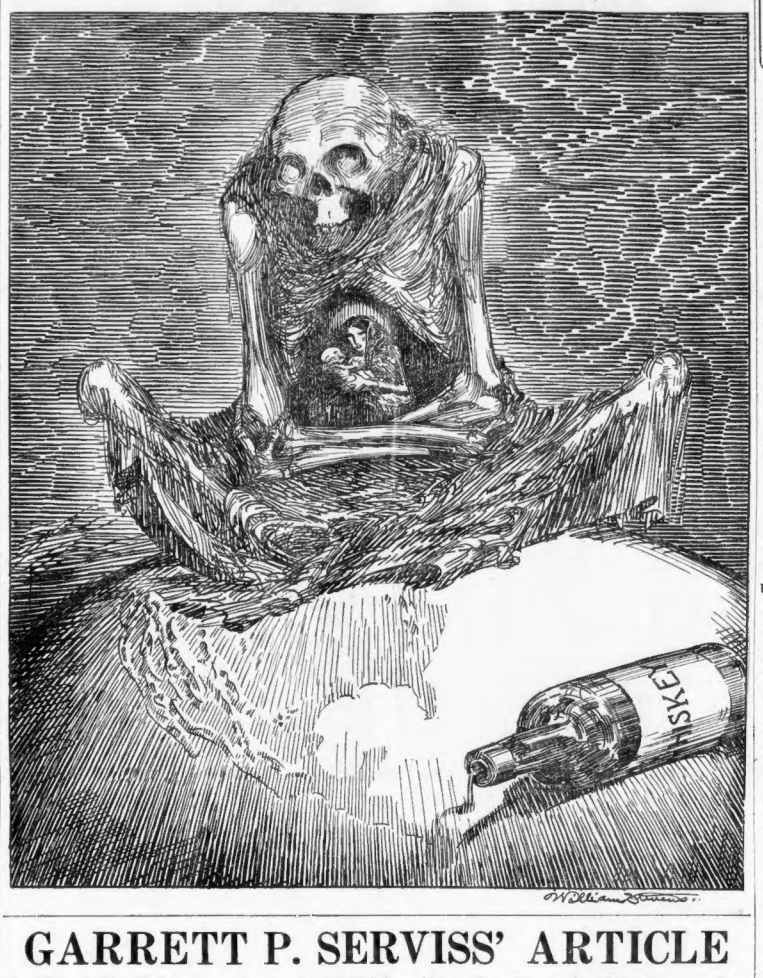
Of course, she treats you nicely because you are a friend of her husband.

She may appear to welcome your presence, but she doesn't.

If you were a suburbanite or Summer cottager, and went to the country or the shore to get a needed rest for yourself and family, you would soon spot your real friends, the considerate ones, by this very sign.

As long as you yourself know what a comfort it is to lounge and be carefree on your day off, why cannot you give others the privilege?

Whiskey vs. Civilization



GARRETT P. SERVISS' ARTICLE

In Which He Tells of the Demand of a Writer for a New Name for Our Country, but He Points Out the Difficulty of Picking a New One for Uncle Sam

By Garrett P. Serviss

PROFESSOR ELLEN HAYES, of Wellesley, writing in "Science" under the title "A Country Without a Name," avers that "that particular federation of American States which begins with Maine and ends with Washington needs a name more than it needs a national flower." This is based upon the idea that it is an unjustifiable arrogation to employ the single word "America" to designate the nation whose full official title is "United States of America."

Now, it is custom that establishes these things, and there can be no doubt that the adjective "American" is universally recognized abroad as well as at home to designate a citizen of the United States of America. The noun "America" applied exclusively to the United States has not been so universally used, but the tendency so to use it has increased enormously since the present war began. How the matter was regarded abroad just before this war is plainly shown by this statement in the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica (published 1910-11):

Authority Speaks

"Officially the name is 'United States of America,' but 'The United States' (used as a singular and not a plural) has become accepted as the name of the country, and pre-eminent usage has now made its citizens 'Americans' in distinction from the other inhabitants of North and South America."

It is always desirable, as Professor Hayes indicates, that a country should have a name consisting of a single word, from which a corresponding adjective can be formed. But we by no means present a solitary example of an official national name consisting of several words, and what we do when we call ourselves Americans is precisely what inhabitants of "the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland" do when they call themselves British, only their case is more complicated than ours, since those who come from Ireland call themselves Irish.

"America" is the geographically descriptive or localizing word in our long national designation, and since its employment by us in its adjective form has met with universal acceptance there can be no objection to our making similar use of the noun. Other States of the new world, whether by preference, convenience or courtesy, have, in this sense, left the name "America" to us. The official designation of Mexico is "Estados Unidos Mexicanos," or "Republica Mexicana"; that of Argentine is "Republica Argentina," and that of Brazil is "Estados Unidos do Brazil."

All the other North or South American States use their own particular names. Canada, for instance, has never shown any desire to bear any other designation, and the Canadian does not feel, and has no reason to feel, any jealousy of the exclusive use of the word American to designate a citizen of our republic.

So, it does not appear that our country or our countrymen have need of any other names than those which, by their own choice and "the common consent of mankind" they already bear. At home we call ourselves Americans and speak of our country as the United States; abroad everybody calls us Americans, and everybody is rapidly learning to distinguish our country by the exclusive name of America, so much so that the American abroad seldom uses the term United States in conversing with Europeans.

Typical Names

Such things must grow up by tradition and have their roots in the remote past. "Columbia" would be no more suitable than "America," and, besides, it is already appropriated. We could hardly choose a name from among the tribal designations of the red men, for none of their tribes or nations occupied more than a limited part of what is now the United States.

We must, in fact, admit that the other countries on our side of the world have had better fortune than ours in this matter. Canada is a euphonious and manageable name, of Mohawk Indian origin, found by the French at Montreal, and happily adopted for the whole country.

Mexico is a Spanish rendering, or combination, of Aztec words meaning the place of the war god. Brazil seems to have derived its name from the legendary island of Brasil (later identified with one of the Azores), because it was found to produce a red wood resembling brasil wood. Chile and Peru are of aboriginal origin. Argentina is an invented name based on the Latin word for silver, as Rio de la Plata, the name of its chief river, means silver river in Spanish.

FALLING IN LOVE IS A SERIOUS DUTY

By Winifred Black

"WHAT would you do," the little girl with the big eyes asked, "if you loved a man who did not love you?

"Would you pretend about and trust to luck to get over it, or would you let him know and trust to his sympathy to make him fall in love with you, or would you go away and 'try to forget'"

The little girl with the big eyes isn't joking about it. She's serious, dreadfully serious—she turned pale when she asked me the question, and all the time we were talking she twisted a pink rose in her hand and twisted it until every lovely petal fell and she had nothing left but a poor little broken stick, which had once been a living stem upholding a great, beauty for the delight of mankind.

She wasn't talking about herself, of course.

Oh, no, never, never—she wasn't in love with anyone.

She didn't think she ever would be—men were all right for amusement, but as to falling in love with one of them, no, thank you.

And of course I knew that—why, I was so sure of it that I wouldn't have believed anything different even if the girl had told me herself. I hate to have people tell me things and then wish they hadn't—don't you?

Up from the Past

What do you think I told her, the little girl with the big eyes, about being in love with some one who is not in love with me?

"Well, I don't know," I said. "I might know what I ought to do, and go right on doing the very opposite. Women and men, too, have been known to act in that fashion, especially when they're in love.

"Once, when I was a little girl, I went to a party and at the party was a little boy—nothing like the boys in our village at all.

"He wasn't bashful, to begin with, and he had never chased us with a snake, or jumped out from behind anything and scared us, so there was a great novelty about him.

"And his hair was curly and his eyes were not blue or brown or gray, like the every-day eyes of our town boys.

"They were black—as black as coal, and they burned like coal, too—and he had very white teeth, and his name was hard to pronounce.

"And I fell in love, desperately, madly, tragically in love.

"We played drop-the-handerchief, and all the boys I knew dropped the handkerchief behind me, and I kept wishing the dark-eyed stranger would know that I was alive.

"But he didn't. He never even looked at me, and once when one of the town boys dropped the handkerchief behind me, and I had to run to get away from him, I called out at the top of my voice, not the name of the town boy at all, but the name of the one I wished was running after me, and all my awful secret was betrayed!

"I thought that I never would live through it. I didn't believe I could ever hold up my head again and go to the postoffice after the mail or walk into Sunday School—never, never again.

"And I thought probably I should die very soon and be buried all in white with lilies on my breast, and the handsome stranger would shed a tear over my grave.

Be Sure It's Love

"I had quite a good time imagining this for several days, until all at once I found that I couldn't remember his name, and from that day to this I've never felt very tragically about falling in love.

"Those who fall in love easily are apt to fall in—very often.

"And the sort of love you feel for a man who doesn't care for you is, nine times out of ten, not love at all—but mere infatuation.

"Don't make a fool of yourself, little girl with the big eyes, not for five minutes. Don't be tragic about the man, or about yourself, either.

"There's lots of love in life, and lots of happiness waiting for you yet somewhere.

"Oh, I know you feel today as if you were never going to get over it, and you think you don't want to live if the man you love doesn't love you, but you do, you know, you really do.

PERSHING'S CRUSADERS SHALL NOT PERISH

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

WE will suppose for the sake of argument that young Jones, who has fought so splendidly in the war, has been severely wounded. Ultimately he wakes up in a hospital and finds that he has lost both legs and one arm. About him are others, who, like himself, have been maimed and crippled or blinded for life.

He is told that the worst is over and that he will recover. And then the worst, the blackest worse, more dreadful than any physical suffering, begins for him. He thinks of his future, when he will be dependent on relatives, perhaps none too prosperous themselves, and who in spite of their sympathy for him will inevitably consider him more and more of a burden as time goes on. And he knows that he would rather, far rather, have died on the battlefield than live such a life as his imagination pictures.

But now he is given the best medicine in the world, the surest cure for ills of mind and body—hope! Not a vague, nebulous promise of better things, but the solid substantial certainty. The biggest chance a man could have, well or maimed, is his. His future may be just as independent and prosperous as he chooses to make it.

The government, following the example of the foreign countries involved in this war, is planning to give every disabled man the opportunity to fit himself for the trade, occupation or profession which best accords with his former training or his present inclination.

He will be supplied without cost with the mechanical limbs or artificial devices—and these are very different from the clumsy old affairs — which are required for his physical convenience and dexterity, and his pension will be paid him throughout his life, regardless of whether his earning capacity be great or small.

Red Cross Leads

While waiting for the adoption of a national program, the American Red Cross has already established an institute for the re-education of the disabled soldier, and is gaining many wonderful results. And the French and English records show that many men who during former wars would have been considered hopelessly out of the running, are through this special training in better positions and earning far more money than they did before they entered the service.

Young Jones is encouraged, when he meets other soldiers as badly handicapped as he, or worse, who have successfully entered upon careers that would have seemed impossible to them before being disabled, because of the expense involved in securing the necessary training. It is marvelous to read of what some of these men are accomplishing.

The disabled soldier of the past, broken in health and spirit, doing what pitiful jobs he could to eke out his pension, is a blot on the national escutcheon that will be wiped out forever.

The children of the future will say to other children with pride, "My father was crippled in the great war. What did yours do for his country?"

Bobby Jones' scar, as long as he lives, will be to him and to his children the insignia of rank. The boys who are fighting in France today constitute America's real aristocracy.

Woman's Part

And the women! What a tremendous part they will have to play in the work of reconstruction. Are they strong enough, patient and tender enough, to give their maimed and broken men not tears —oh, never tears!—nor yet the sympathy which saddens and casts down, but the inspiration, the understanding and true sympathy which will minimize difficulties and stimulate ambition and courage and belief in success.

There will be difficult days of readjustment to physical disabilities, and the training for the new occupation may sometimes seem wearisomely slow. And through these seasons the women must prove that they are not unworthy of the men who have been willing to lose their lives, and now, even on the material plane, have a chance to find them in a new and richer experience.
